McPherson pledges balance, accessibility

Patton upended in Assembly bid; Yee Steck takes CUSD race; Floyd, Beemer re-elected to CAWD

By PAUL WOLF

THE BATTLE was between fresh blood — the untainted political newcomer — and the "career politician," as Bruce McPherson cast it.

By all appearances, voters in the 27th State Assembly District responded. The Republican won by a decisive margin — 44,294 votes to 39,000 — notable considering a district with a preponderance of registered Democrats.

The retired editor of the Santa Cruz Sentinel had only the experience of "an interested observer," insisted opponent Gary Patton.

Patton is the 19-year Santa Cruz County supervisor who was poised for a logical progression upward — to replace Sam Farr, now lodged in the House of Representatives.

MCPHERSON

The neophyte status notwithstanding, McPherson was undaunted. He often spoke of his "record" as some of the editorials he had written years ago. In the context of today's anti-incumbent sentiment, he didn't seem at a great disadvantage.

As for now, McPherson faces some immediate challenges. Because Farr left for Washington in the middle of a two-year Assembly term, McPherson will have to defend his seat in 1994, anticipating a June primary and a November runoff.

Promising balance

McPherson, 49, pledged to be an accessible representative who will strike a balance between the needs of the economy and the natural environment. He said he wants a role in reforming the cumbersome state permit process, which he said is affecting California's overall economic vitality.

McPherson told The Carmel Pine Cone he plans to open a Monterey office within the next two weeks.

Jewelers, police in verbal cross fire following heist

By SCOTT BREARTON

CARMEL POLICE Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras says he has "nothing to hide" in response to criticism from members of the business community who charge he and other officers acted improperly during last week's armed robbery of a local jewelry store.

"There's no one who would've liked to have caught this guy more than me," Poitras said, declaring he and fellow officers acted appropriately under the circumstances. "We're in the business of trying to apprehend criminals."

At about 5:15 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 26, a lone male gunman entered Kerry Lee Inc. (located at San Carlos and Sixth), produced a blue steel revolver and forced Evelyn Devaul, a 43-year-old female employee, to the rear of the store, where he bound her hands and feet.

The robber then ransacked the store, removing some $500,000 worth of jewelry, including four-carat diamond rings and an $80,000 pearl necklace. As responding officers approached the scene on foot, the suspect fled in a newer-model white Oldsmobile Cutlass with a California license plate number "similar to 3CLL712."

Devaul, who called her experience "humiliating," told The Carmel Pine Cone Monday she was relieved it was over.

"I don't know why it wasn't so scary as it should have been," she said. "I think shock had a lot to do

Candlelight vigil attracts 200

Community turns out to back Pine Inn workers

ABOUT 200 people attended Monday night's vigil at the Pine Inn on Ocean Avenue in Carmel for the 48 employees who may not be rehired by Marriott, the new managers of the dining room facilities.

By SUSAN BECK

THROUGHOUT THE decades, Carmel's Pine Inn restaurant employees have faithfully served their local customers.

But the tables turned Monday night when dozens of Carmel residents attended a candlelight vigil in support of those longtime employees, who may lose their jobs Sunday, Nov. 7, when Marriott Management Services takes over the dining room facilities of the 104-year-old establishment.

The vigil started at dusk in front of the hotel on Ocean Avenue, as each participant carried a colored flag and lighted candle. While everyone gathered to sing "Amazing Grace," a stunning sunset enhanced the somber and peaceful mood of the crowd.

Carmel Mayor Ken White observed there were far more people at the vigil than he had expected.

"I was pleasantly surprised," White said. "I don't remember a time when so many people have gathered to show

Arson sentencing delayed again

By SUSAN BECK

THE SENTENCING of three Carmel juveniles in connection with the June 13 arson of the science wing at Carmel High School was postponed for the second time Wednesday afternoon.

The three young men, all sporting ties in a range of attire from casual to formal, waited with their parents in Monterey County Superior Court Judge John Anton's court chambers for the hearing to begin at 1:30 p.m.

Richard Rosen, a Monterey attorney representing one of the youths, spoke for all three when he asked Anton for a continuance until Dec. 1.

He explained the two other attorneys on the case, Lawrence Biegel and Mel Grimes, were unable to attend the hearing.

"It's unfortunate we cannot get to the sentencing," Anton said. "Everyone is on hold."

All three defendants were placed on a Home Supervision Program with the Juvenile Probation Department, which requires them to be accompanied by a parent at all times unless they are at school or work.

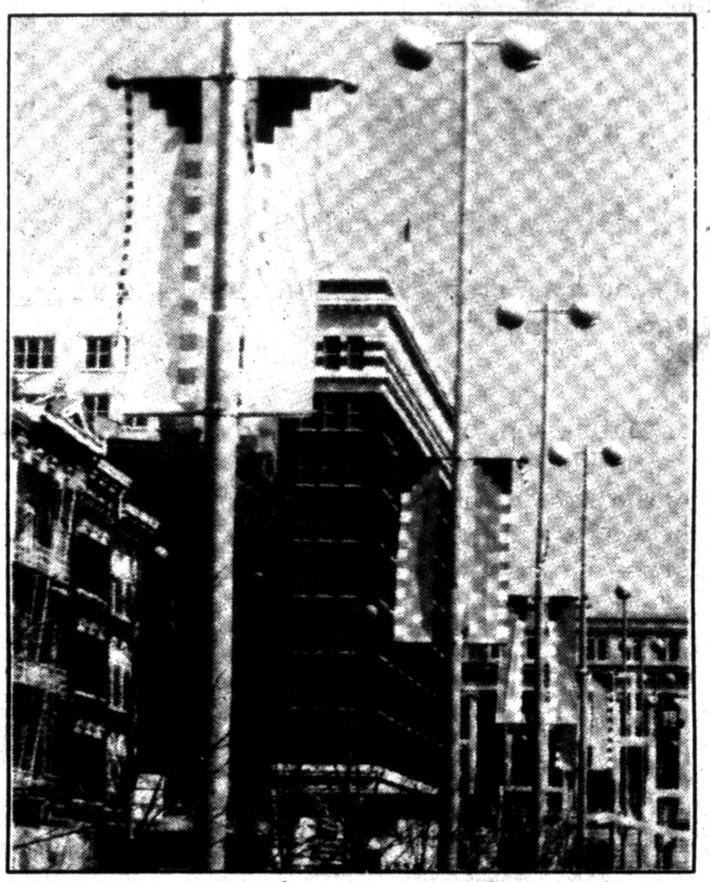
THE CINCINNATI KID

Former Carmel resident helps shape the country's new No. 1 rated city

By SUSAN BECK

CINCINNATI HAS supplanted Seattle as the "most desirable city in North America," and wouldn't you know it — a former Carmel resident is one of the key players who has helped the Ohio city attain its new status.

For the past 23 years, Marcia McGinnis Shortt has worked for the Office of Architecture and Urban Design in Cincinnati. She's the graphic designer responsible for logo development, designation sign programs, urban design plans and a myriad of other city identity graphics.



FESTIVE BANNERS for a street produce market are indicative of Marcia Shortt's work to create a pleasant environment in Cincinnati.

"We were all shocked," recalled Shortt, in a telephone interview, when she and her staff heard about the city's new status.

Every four years, Prentice Hall Publishers "Places Rated Almanac" issues its evaluation of the most desirable city in North America based on categories such as transportation, health care, the arts, higher education, cost of living, jobs and crime.

"I think our staff was very influential in creating the city's status, which led to the distinction as the best in the nation," said Shortt.

Her four-member graphic design staff's most recent work includes Cincinnati's Findlay Market graphics, Police Car Identity Program, sign systems for Skywalk, Convention Center Expansion and Court Street Market.

She added that members of her staff also participate on several of the city's boards to assist in the decision making of creating a unified design voice for Cincinnati.

"My work is to create the city's 'identity,'" said Shortt, who moved to Ohio with her husband, Paul, in 1970.

Carmel resident

She was raised in Carmel from the time her parents, Bob and "Gert" McGinnis, partners of Phinney-McGinnis Travel in Monterey, moved to California from Chicago in 1948.

She decided she wanted to live on the East Coast in the summer of 1964 when she, along with 19 other young women, won the Mademoiselle Magazine "Guest Editor Contest."

After working at Mademoiselle in New York, she attended the School of Art and Architecture at Yale University for her masters degree in graphic design.

Her interest in art started at an early age in Carmel. She majored in art at Monterey Peninsula College and settled on graphic design at San Jose State. During the summer months, she was the designer and coordinator of signs, symbols and environmental graphics for the summer fairs in Monterey and San Mateo counties.

After graduating from Yale, Shortt worked at the Carmel abuzz: Young, old 'celebrate community'

By PAUL WOLF

IT'S THOSE adorable images one cannot forget: An 18-month old in a stroller — dressed up as a cowboy, a hat on the head, pistol in the hand, pacifier in the mouth.

And those charming juxtapositions: a vampire, a pirate and a bunny, all walking in row. Parents, sometimes even the costumed family dog, became part of the procession.

In a seamless fashion, the annual Halloween Parade was joined for the first time with the city's 77th birthday party. And together they formed an occasion to be enjoyed by young and old alike.

"This is tremendous," said Maggie Hardy, who chaired the Carmel Celebrates Community Committee, as hundreds socialized in the parking lot of Sunset Center after the conclusion of the parade.

"An absolute smash," said Carmel Mayor Ken White. "People are here talking about old times. There are people here who have not seen each other for a year — since last year's party."

In 1991, Carmel celebrated its 75th birthday, touted as the "Diamond Jubilee." It was such a success that, in the summer of 1992, White and others began the planning for an annual celebration.

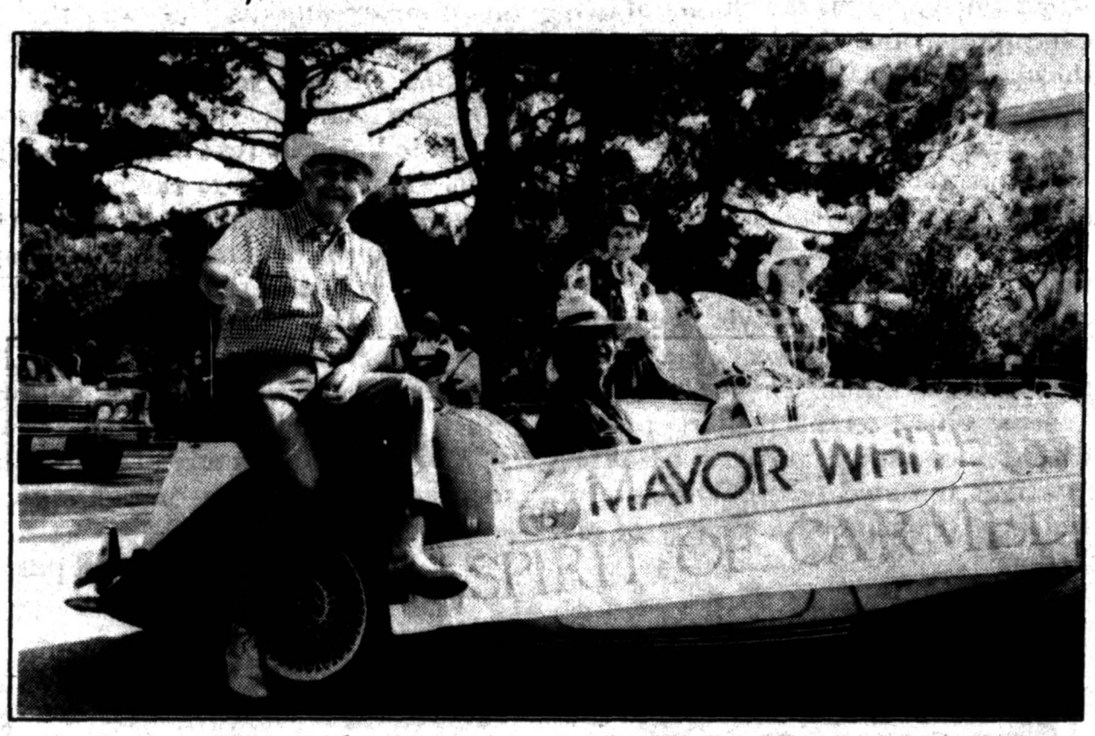
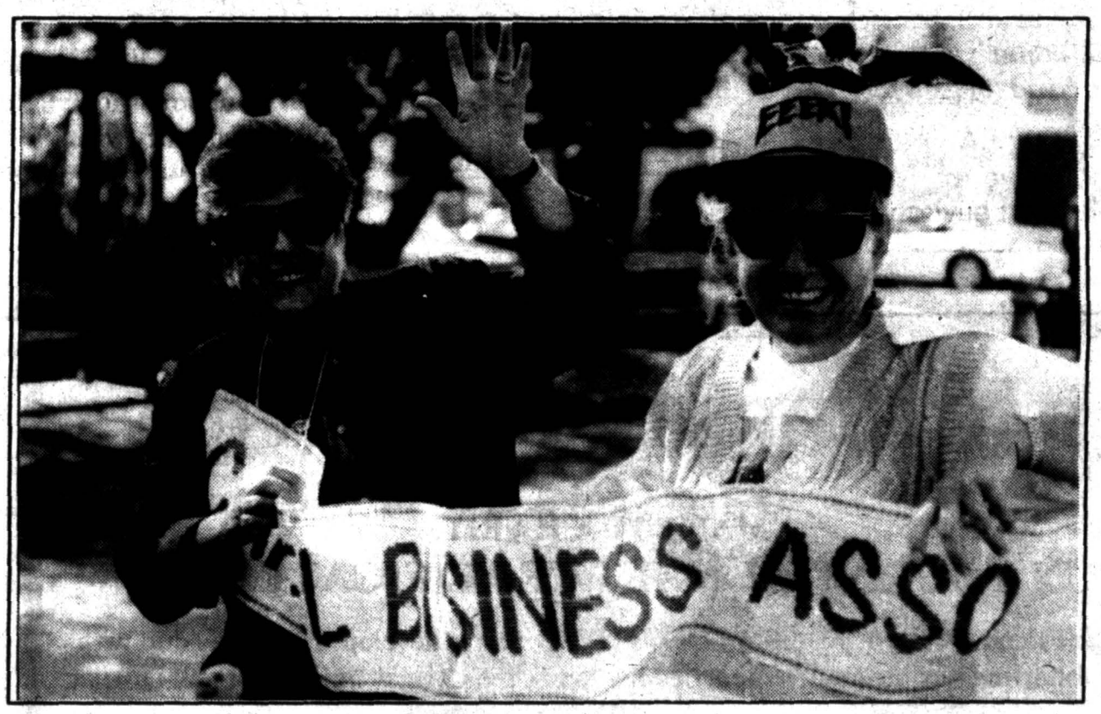
ONE-YEAR-OLD Michael Ivano Fritter (asleep) won the preschool category in the costume contest. His four-year-old brother, Andrew, took advantage of the opportunity to poke Michael's forehead.



CARMEL MAYOR Ken White passed out candy and shook hands as he rode in the lead vehicle in the parade. Carmel High School senior Brittany Struve (far right) was honored for her community service hours as the "Spirit of Carmel."



CARMEL BUSINESS Association Executive Director Toni Jepson and assistant Debby Alexander unraveled the CBA banner prior to the start of Sunday's Halloween parade.

Ken White assumes expansive role of mayor's office

■ Analysis: His leadership style is based on initiative, negotiation, consensus-building.

By PAUL WOLF

LAST MONTH, when Mayor Ken White assembled a group of social service professionals to discuss the prospect of a help network for "at-risk" seniors, he was testing the waters on one of his own ideas.

Amid eager nods, White shared experiences from his 1992 mayoral campaign. Canvassing the neighborhoods, he had witnessed deplorable living conditions for many older Carmel residents. Something had to be done.

White was using his influence to gather the appropriate parties. The positive reception for Project St. Bernard, as it is called, suggested there may be promise for it.

Using influence

White uses that influence in different ways, and his latest cause is a good illustration. He seeks to do more than chair the five-person city council and act as its figurehead.

After all, the senior's help network would not call upon the city resources; it does not fit snugly within the function of mayor. But who better to take on such a cause?

"Too many mayors are too short-scoped; Ken has a greater field of vision," said Bob Fischer, one of White's four council colleagues. "He is a different kind of mayor, and I think it is good."

Not everyone is so sanguine — as there have been detractors, many of whom may have begun as strong supporters.

Beth Wright, president of the Carmel Residents Association, said she "applauds his work on the humanitarian issues," but added: "He always tries to bring both sides together, but it will not always work. I don't think it is good for him to go to one side and say, 'I agree,' and then go to another and say that same thing."

Recent history

Wright's grumbling makes sense, especially with the memory of Measure H's passage still fresh.

The CRA figured prominently in White's victory against former Mayor Barney Laiolo, but the mayor went on to support the controversial rezoning measure, which the CRA fervently opposed.

But White has gained the support of others in the process. Measure H seemed almost as much a referendum on the mayor as on the rezoning it proposed. The initiative passed by a mere10 votes.

A week or so before the June 8 election day, White played a risky political hand that may help to characterize his leadership style.

Since both sides of the Measure H debate had observed a number of similar problems in the complex rezoning ordinance, White announced that a few changes to the language of Ordinance 92-23 would make everyone comfortable — even if not thoroughly satisfied — with the legislation.

He promised to form a committee "the day after the election" to make amendments, should Measure H pass. That is exactly what he did.

KEN WHITE 'has a greater field of vision,' according to fellow city council member Bob Fischer.

Here was a case in which White could have been criticized for reopening a matter settled by the voters, but the amendments appeared to be just the thing. They were quickly approved by the planning commission and city council with little public opposition.

The point of this episode appears to be as follows. White won't let victory stand where there is the chance of more compromise and "bridge-building" — the slogan of his '92 campaign.

'Open style'

"He is good at bringing the city together," said Toni Jepson, executive director of the Carmel Business Association. "I really believe he listens to everybody. It is a very open style. We can sit down and talk, whether we agree on everything or not."

Jepson has been particularly pleased with the monthly mayor's breakfast meetings, initiated during White's term, which have included a variety of city leaders.

According to Jepson, certain problems that otherwise would not have been discussed have been identified and solved. As examples, she cited better signs for the CBA's visitor center and new policies that will lead to less noisy and disruptive garbage pickups.

White also has resurrected the city's staging of periodic town hall meetings on issues of community-wide concern. His goal has been to provide a more informal forum for viewpoints than city council meetings.

Taking initiative

White took office just as the city was about to begin its first round of budget cuts. He responded to the cuts in city services by organizing new volunteer programs, particularly gardening and weeding in connection with the Forest and Beach Department.

Without such new programs, said City Forester Gary Kelly, "We would have a much lower level of service right now."

Kelly described many of the department support services as originating with

Council to move forward on Sunset renovation

Task force member Davis Factor is 'logical choice' to lead non-profit fund-raising group

By PAUL WOLF

IT SOUNDS almost like a contradiction in terms: the architectural group will present "final conceptual plans" for proposed improvements to Sunset Center.

BOOR/A, the Portland, Ore.-based firm that is doing the initial design work, will present the Carmel City Council with schematics, renderings and models for improvements at a special Thursday, Nov. 4 meeting.

And yes, the plans are final — but they are final only for this conceptual phase.

The council, meeting at 3:30 p.m. at Carpenter Hall, is expected to vote to receive BOOR/A's work to date. The council will receive a presentation on the project outline and designs for the estimated $10 million project, which will rely entirely on private funds. The public is invited to attend.

"We are now further along on the road toward the much-needed improvements to Sunset Center than we ever have been before," said Mayor Ken White.

New group to form

With the council's action, the Sunset Center Renovation Task Force will be dissolved. Meanwhile, if all goes to plan, Davis Factor, Jr., a task force member, will take over as the head of a new non-profit group that will spearhead the fund-raising effort, according to Linda Anderson, task force chair.

Factor has broad experience as a fund raiser, notably in connection with the Carmel Bach Festival and the Robert Louis Stevenson Board of Trustees.

"He was definitely the logical choice," said Anderson.

BOOR/A has carried out the initial work for a mere $30,000 — the only money the city is expected to invest in the project. It is not clear at present who will decide whether BOOR/A or another firm will be in charge of the remainder of the project.

When you have another home to sell

You've decided it's time to move, but you're afraid to place your present home on the market until you've found a new one and completed negotiations for its purchase. At the same time, however, you find that most sellers are reluctant to finalize offers from buyers who must include contingencies calling for the sale of a current residence before settling on the new one.

If you're caught in this dilemma, the first step out of it is to contact a professional Realtor. He or she can list your home, showing you how it can be done without the risk of putting your family out on the street. Once you have a firm contract from a qualified buyer, you will become much more attractive to sellers. When you do find the perfect home, you greatly increase your chances of being able to buy it.

with it."

Devaul said she was frustrated and "very disappointed" the suspect escaped.

"I don't understand how he got away," she said. "My main concern now is that they (police officers) get the training they need so they know what to do next time."

While Devaul said the suspect did "stupid things" which cost him time, she also helped to stall him. But she downplayed the significance of her actions.

"Even though you know it's not your fault and there's nothing you can do about it, you still feel responsible," Devaul said. "It's not bravery. It's not being a hero. It's just reacting to the situation."

Timely response

Poitras said he arrived at the crime scene in less than one and one-half minutes. He arrived in an unmarked patrol car, just before three other dispatched officers came upon the scene.

Poitras parked his car in the southbound lane of San Carlos and radioed that he was at the scene. Shortly thereafter, he made contact with the reporting parties – Henry Salamon, a local gem broker, and jewelry store owner Sarkis Sakiz, who had called police from a cordless phone on the east side of San Carlos.

But, according to Poitras, when he asked the men to identify the suspect, they weren't able to provide an immediate description.

"I didn't get anything," Poitras said. "All they would say is, 'He's in there, he's in there,'" pointing to the Kerry Lee jewelry store across the street.

Leaving the reporting parties, Poitras said, he walked across the street diagonally with his gun drawn, being careful to avoid detection by the suspect.

"Before I got to the sidewalk (west side)," Poitras said, "they started to yell, 'There he is.'"

Poitras said he then looked back at Salamon and Sakiz, trying to determine where they were pointing.

"They were pointing to the other side of the street," he said, "to the northeast corner of San Carlos and Sixth. When I saw the car, I knew that's what they must be talking about."

According to Poitras, he was 30 to 40 feet from the car when he realized it contained the suspect.

"I took three or four steps in the direction of the car," he said. "By that time, the car lurched forward and (he) drove away. I could not have closed the distance on foot between me and the car before it lurched forward.

"He (the suspect) was last seen by me turning right (headed eastbound) on Fifth. He turned right and was gone."

The suspect had a head start on the police, according to Poitras, who noted all four officers were on foot when the White Olds fled the scene.

"We had to go back to our cars," he said. "Traffic inhibited our response. I was parked in the wrong direction with eight cars (backed up) behind me."

Poitras said he returned to the store to check on the victim's condition within two minutes of the time the suspect fled the scene.

Jewelers seek 'full-scale investigation'

In a letter directed to Carmel Mayor Ken White and city council members, Kerry Lee Johnson lashed out at Carmel police officers for their performance during last week's armed robbery of his jewelry store.

"If the Carmel Police Department would admit that significant mistakes were made, it might then learn from them and prevent similar, preventable errors from occurring during another life-threatening situation," Johnson wrote.

In the Oct. 31 letter, Johnson called for "a full-scale investigation" into the matter.

When Carmel Police Captain Don Fuselier was asked if the department planned to conduct an internal investigation into how officers responded to the incident, he replied, "Above all, we are going to continue to try to solve this crime. That is our primary mission.

"We critically critique every significant incident," Fuselier added. "This one is no different."

Johnson's letter charged that officers at the scene failed to verbally or physically confront the suspect as he walked out of Kerry Lee Inc. on Oct. 26 with a garbage bag containing jewelry worth $500,000.

Johnson said he thought it was probably the largest armed robbery in Carmel history.

"It's probably true if that's the amount," said Carmel Police Detective Pete Poitras. "The largest one that I can recall was in 1982, at Jewels by Jeffrey in Carmel Plaza."

Poitras estimated the value of the jewelry taken in that armed robbery at "somewhere around $400,000."

"I've been here 18 years," Johnson said. "I don't know of a larger armed robbery."

Fuselier would neither confirm nor deny Johnson's claim.

"I don't have time to research that today," he said. "Because we're not computerized, we'd have to do that by hand. That is very time-consuming.

"I've checked with Pete (Poitras) and we have yet to get an inventory from the victim in this robbery," Fuselier added. "I have nothing to compare it with."

Johnson said his main concern centers around the Carmel Police Department's ability to respond to armed robberies and their willingness openly discuss what went wrong.

"How will they ready themselves for the next armed robbery?" Johnson asked. "What preparations will they take to make sure this doesn't happen again?"

CARMEL'S KENT WALL LEADS 'BUDDING SUCCESS STORY'

Promising scrip campaign thrills new FOCUS leader

By SCOTT BREARTON

KENT WALL has inherited a good thing and he wants to keep it going.

Wall, a 49-year-old Carmel resident, was installed as Friends of Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS) board president in August, replacing Barry Kilzer, who served for two years.

Wall moved his family from Virginia to the Monterey Peninsula eight years ago and has two children enrolled at Carmel High School – Danielle, a senior, and Matthew, a freshman.

While Wall stays busy as a professor of systems engineering at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, he still finds time to get involved in public education.

"If everybody says 'no, I have too much to do,' then nobody does anything, even in these worthwhile causes," said Wall. "So I said, 'OK, I'll put my time where my mouth is.'"

Wall said the newly unveiled scrip fund-raising campaign has been "a budding success story" for FOCUS.

The campaign involves scrip, or substitute money, that consumers can purchase from local merchants, such as Safeway, Albertson's, Longs Drug Stores and the Del Monte Shopping Center.

Every time a consumer makes a purchase at one of the participating businesses, 4 to 10 percent of the purchase amount is returned to FOCUS, according to Wall.

"It seems to be taking off," Wall said. "Our expectations are very high. We are hoping to get enough people (involved) so that we can turn over as much as $35,000 (gross) per week."

Wall said if FOCUS can continue at its current pace, it should generate nearly $10,000 per month after covering the cost of managing the scrip program.

According to Wall, the average family of four spends about $500 per month for food. If half of the approximately 800 families in the Carmel Unified School District regularly bought groceries with scrip instead of cash, he said the campaign would gross nearly $2.4 million annually.

Of that amount, Wall said FOCUS would get 4 to 6 percent, based on the percentage each participating merchant donates.

"We're still in the initial stages," Wall observed. "More and more people are coming on board. We're still spreading the word.

Correcting funding deficiencies

"If people change their habits and use scrip instead of greenbacks, we can go a long way to correct some of the funding deficiencies we've found in our public schools," Wall continued. "All they have to do is use scrip and the merchants are the ones who are making the donations."

As for the future of the scrip campaign, Wall says he doesn't see any reason why it can't go on forever.

"It's so easy," he noted. "What can be better than getting other people to donate money to your child's education?"

The annual "Fonathon" fund raiser held in February has been the traditional money-maker for FOCUS. The Fonathon is a fund-raising campaign in which district families are solicited for donations by telephone.

Wall said he hopes the scrip program will eventually make it obsolete.

"We are hoping scrip will be so successful that we will never have to bother anybody at home – at night – again," Wall said. "We'll be generating much more money than the Fonathon, without it being your money.

"All we have to do is encourage them to continue to help us out – support them, patronize their establishments and they'll do their part. It's a win-win situation."

Wall said he hopes to add more participating merchants in the future.

What else has FOCUS done lately?

According to Wall, its board members have developed a "very good working relationship" with organizers of Concours Italiana, an annual car show at Quail Lodge. Wall said he has arranged to help supply labor for ticket booths. In exchange, organizers will donate part of their ticket sales to FOCUS. Just recently, they presented a

Commission candidates to be interviewed

THE CARMEL City Council will conduct half-hour-long public interviews with hopeful planning commissioners beginning at 2:30 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 9.

The interviews will be carried out at the Carmel City Council Chambers, at City Hall. The council is expected to make its selection after its get-acquainted sessions.

Five commission candidates have signed up for interviews. They are:

- Barbara Smoak (registered nurse).
- Marshall Hydorn (retired pilot).
- Paula Hazdovac (artist and contractor).
- Yoko Whitaker (interior designer).
- Pope Coleman (retired).

Whoever is chosen will replace Commissioner Lindsay Hanna.

By PAUL WOLF

AS THE City of Carmel prepares to recognize one of its most esteemed citizens, Barney Laiolo, it has learned once again that even simple ideas can raise complex issues.

Meeting Nov. 2, the Carmel City Council voted 4-1 (with Barbara Livingston dissenting) to approve the installation of a boulder and plaque with pathway at Mission Trails Park in honor of Laiolo, a former three-term mayor.

The commemoration originated with a request by a group known as Friends of Barney Laiolo, led by resident Ron Meyer.

Laiolo is alive and well and still living in Carmel with wife Elinor, herself a former council member. Laiolo, not present at the meeting, was mayor 1968-72, and 1980-82. In 1971, he and his council colleagues acquired a large portion of the park for the city.

The council was taking up an issue that had already been the subject of extensive debate at the Carmel Forest and Beach Commission.

Council members grappled with the issue of whether to honor a living member of the community. They also discussed whether they would be setting a "precedent" of "political groups pressuring the council" to honor their par-

"Ken's brainchild," recalling, "He asked me to develop a program whereby we could use the volunteer efforts of the community, and we did that."

White also has taken a leadership role in turning the format of Carmel's massive 75th birthday party, the "Diamond Jubilee," into an annual event. His vision has been that the event should be an opportunity for the citizens of Carmel to forget their political differences.

To detractors, White may be prone to seeking the impossible, even compromising the ideals of residential primacy. To supporters, White, whose term will expire in April, has been doing a skillful job as facilitator, the man in the middle.

Yet there is more, as his Project St. Bernard may suggest. White's ambition has been beyond that of ordinary council member. However his success as mayor will be measured, he will never be considered one who didn't believe his office could make a difference in a variety of ways.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By DORIS DAY

A sad goodbye

How I miss my dear friend Vernon Haas. His passing is still so difficult for me to accept after almost a year and a half. And now those of us who loved the Haases must deal with the loss of Vernie's beloved wife, Jane.

What a darling couple they were! I enjoyed their company so much, particularly because of our shared love for the four-leggers. Dandy and Nellie were adopted from my pet foundation and they brought so much joy to the Haas household.

As much as Vernie and Jane loved to be out and about, our meals together were limited to luncheons because they couldn't bear to be away from their babies for the evening. Although I have always invited them back to the house to visit my four-legged family after lunch, their own pets were on their minds as they dashed home to be with them.

I'll never forget you, my darling friends. You'll be missed by all who loved and admired you, but especially by Dandy and Nellie who were left behind.

Window watch

Upper-story window ledges and balconies can be dangerous lounging spots for dogs and cats. Ruptured lungs, broken bones or teeth, and torn spleens or bladders are some of the injuries animals have sustained in accidents such as falls from high places.

Please don't put your pets in danger! Keep windows screened or closed and supervise your pet when he's taking a siesta on the terrace.

Lingering fleas?

As cool weather approaches, the flea population will taper off and we'll have a reprieve for a few months. To quickly rid your home of those few remaining critters, a reader offers this tip:

Put 20 Mule Team Borax in a clean coffee can, poke holes in the plastic lid, and shake the powder on carpets throughout the house and on outside mats. Use a broom or stiff brush to work the powder down into the fibers. Wait one-half hour, then vacuum. My reader tells me this absolutely works. There is no odor, and she has eradicated fleas from her home without any harm to her four-leggers.

Thought for the week

"No one appreciates the very special genius of your conversation as a dog does."

— Christopher Morley

See you next time!

Wall charts FOCUS' future

check for more than $10,000 to FOCUS from 1993 Concours Italiana proceeds.

'Working relationship'

"There's interest on the part of both parties to establish a long-term working relationship for as long as it continues to be a success here," Wall said.

FOCUS was conceived as a non-profit organization which would channel tax-deductible donations to CUSD schools, according to Wall.

While FOCUS is prohibited from using donations to fund capital improvements, Wall said, over the years it has helped provide what the CUSD Board of Education sometimes cannot – learning materials that directly benefit children in the classroom.

According to Wall, teachers are asked to submit grant requests. A FOCUS subcommittee reviews the proposals. He said inexpensive materials are usually approved immediately, while items costing more than $1,000 are approved at the board level.

"If it's a very big ticket item, its impact will need to be more clearly defined," Wall said. "We will invite the teacher to come and explain the situation and put their case forward to us."

FOCUS board members include Wall, Kilzer, Paul Porter, Pam Klaumann, Lynn Bohnen, Corliss Kelly (secretary), Bruce Hyndman (treasurer), Nan Heller, Patty Armstrong, Carol Hart, Leslie MacMillan, Sidney Morris, Paula Stark, Judy Fisher and Marti Morgenrath.

Wall said he would like to see more parents get involved with FOCUS: "We would welcome more involved parents and members. There's nothing like more enthusiastic and active people, and more concerned and active parents. A school system can only flourish under those circumstances.

"I would be very pleased to preside over a board meeting with 20 or 30 parents."

The FOCUS board meets at 5:30 p.m. on the second Monday of every month in the Carmel Middle School library.

Additional information about FOCUS or the scrip fund-raising campaign can be obtained by calling Wall at 626-4449, or Kilzer at 624-7783.

Pacific Meadows dining room to close Nov. 15 — 'no lag time for residents who need food service'

By SUSAN BECK

PACIFIC MEADOWS' residents can take comfort in knowing some type of food service operation will be formalized by the time the Pink Rose Cafe finally closes its doors in less than two weeks.

That's the word from Charleen Dean, administrator for the 200-unit retirement community in Carmel Valley. She said several food service proposals have been submitted by various community groups, but nothing has been decided.

"Be assured, however," said Dean, "there will be no lag time for the residents who need food service. Those people who clearly need food service will have a resource to tap into that is compatible and affordable for all incomes by Nov. 16."

The decision to close down the dining room at Pacific Meadows on Monday, Nov. 15, was made in October by the facility's managers, American Baptist Homes of the West (ABHOW).

"It's gratifying to see how many people from the community have come forward to help us," said Dean. "We intend to look at all the possibilities."

Steve Garner, ABHOW's senior vice president, told residents at a meeting in October that the dining room, which opened in November 1991, was operating at a loss of about $8,000 a month because of a lack of attendance by the residents to support the cost.

Garner also said at the meeting the administration was working diligently toward an alternate way to provide food service for those people who are unable to manage for themselves and rely almost entirely on the dining room for their evening meal.

He noted it was the first time in ABHOW's history it had to close down a dining facility at any of its 17 retirement communities in California, Washington and Arizona.

ON NOV. 15, the Pink Rose Cafe will close down. Pacific Meadows' residents have been assured, however, some form of food service will continue.

Candlelight vigil attracts 200 to Pine Inn rally support for this type of thing. It shows how very important these employees are to the city. The community is obviously concerned about them."

In all, there are 48 Pine Inn restaurant employees with 376 years between them who may not be rehired by Marriott, the organization chosen by the hotel's owner Richard Gunner to manage the dining facilities.

One of the stipulations from Marriott was a guarantee to give the current employees first priority for being rehired, but no guarantees were made.

The employees are members of the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees Union, Local 483. Leonard O'Neill, the union's chief executive officer, was the key player in orchestrating Monday's vigil.

O'Neill, who prepared for about 125 people to show up in support of the Pine Inn employees, said, "We did not expect the community to be so supportive. It's very rare. It's a really unique situation."

Not only are the current employees possibly out of work, O'Neill said, but the union may also be out at the Pine Inn. "Marriott knows the employees want the union, but whether they chose to blindly ignore it is beyond me."

O'Neill said several of the employees were told by Marriott they could expect to know one way or another if they will be rehired by Friday, Nov. 5.

Lloyd Queen, human resources director for Marriott in Southern Calfornia's regional office, said Marriott's goal is to hire the best qualified work force, not to challenge the union.

Out of about 2,000 Marriott establishments across the country, there are 300 that honor union contracts, said Queen.

MAXINE JENNINGS, left, and Elinor and Barney Laiolo joined in the singing at Monday night's vigil to support the Pine Inn employees whose jobs are on the line.

CARMEL CITY Councilwoman, Barbara Brooks, hopes Marriott appreciates the community's effort to support the Pine Inn restaurant employees.

"The optimum for Marriott is not to have a union contract," said Queen. "But if the employees want to have a union, that's their decision. At this time, it's too preliminary to properly answer whether we would challenge a union contract. Let's be there and operate first."

Wise choice

Barbara Brooks, a Carmel City Councilwoman, attended Monday's vigil at the Pine Inn and said she hoped Marriott "will see the wisdom of keeping these faithful employees on. I don't think local residents will respond well to having new employees at the Pine Inn."

Former Carmel mayor, Barney Laiolo was present Monday night and said how pleased he was the community came together for the employees "who worked so hard at the Pine Inn."

He recalled all of the years he and his family faithfully went to the Pine Inn on Saturday night for dinner and now they continue to go there on special occasions.

"My particular fear is that this is a foot in the door for Marriott to take over the entire Pine Inn operation," said Laiolo. "We don't need any big operation like Marriott in Carmel."

NICK DEL Rosario has worked at the Pine Inn for 37 years and is waiting to hear whether he still has a job with Marriott.

ticular champions, as Councilman Bob Fischer explained.

Matters weren't made any simpler by the fact that Meyer was put on the spot for his published statements in one of the Carmel weeklies. Reportedly, he suggested that certain council members were putting up a roadblock to honoring Laiolo — even though these members hadn't been consulted about where they stood on the matter.

Other questions that emerged: Would benches in the park be intrusive to the park's rustic atmosphere? And can a grove of Redwoods be named for someone well after the trees have been planted ?

In the end, the council seemed more eager to take action than belabor the matter.

The desire to recognize Laiolo became the evening's overriding factor.

ED JORDAN, president of the Carmel Public Library Foundation, congratulates Randy Elliott, who was selected as the Foundation's 'Man of the Year.'

THE FIRST-EVER Volunteer Recognition Reception was held Friday, Oct. 30 at Monterey Peninsula Country Club by the Carmel Public Library Foundation.

Ed Jordan, foundation president, and his wife, Nancy, hosted the event.

The Foundation is currently in the midst of a campaign to raise $65,000 for immediate library needs. In addition, a $3 million endowment campaign is now underway.

Yee Steck captures two-year seat on CUSD board

By SCOTT BREARTON

IN THE wake of her decisive victory Tuesday night, Annette Yee Steck says she looks forward to contributing her financial expertise to the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education.

"I want to make sure my strengths in finance are part of my contribution to the board as soon as possible," Yee Steck said Wednesday.

Yee Steck, an investment banker specializing in public school finance, garnered 2,903 votes, representing 40.7 percent of total votes cast in the race for a two-year seat on the CUSD board.

"I'm excited and I want to thank everybody who worked so tirelessly to help me," noted Yee Steck. "I really knew nothing about the political process and I learned a lot."

CUSD Superintendent Vance Baldwin said he was "very pleased" with the campaign and the outcome.

"We think we had a good slate of candidates running for the board and we're pleased with the election of Annette," Baldwin said.

Yee Steck, 31, said she hopes her running mates stay involved in the schools and wants to represent their views as the district's newest board member.

ANNETTE YEE STECK

"I really pledge to make sure that the people who ran with me in this race are represented," she said.

Yee Steck was followed by Jim Kistenmacher, a local art gallery owner, who captured 1,989 votes, or 27.9 percent of the vote.

Kistenmacher said he was disappointed at the news, but noted he was thankful to the people who voted for him.

"I still remain committed to being involved in the school district," he said.

Yee Steck said Kistenmacher called to congratulate her Wednesday morning.

"I told him that I would try to represent his views," said Yee Steck. "I know that many people voted for him because they know him and trust him.

"He has very strong views on certain topics," she added. "I agree these are important topics and will look into them."

Interestingly, Nancy Dice, a homemaker and parent who had dropped out of the school board race after the ballots had been printed, took third with 1,153 votes, or 16.2 percent.

Ray Burch finished fourth with 1,072 votes, amounting to 15 percent of votes cast.

Dice was amused at her strong showing.

Alliance on Aging: A friend in need

A PIONEERING businesswoman and active member of the community was diagnosed with cancer. Her illness extended over a period of some two years. She spent the better part of a year confined to her home until her death. People who had crowded around her simply dropped away. Visitors were few and far between for the dying woman who had contributed so much.

People are afraid of death. They don't know what to say. Or if visitors will be welcome. It would have meant so much to this individual if visits had been more frequent.

The woman was Ethel M. Clark. The year was 1969. The successful business which she had founded in 1926 was the California Test Bureau, sold in 1965 to McGraw-Hill.

Clark's daughter, June Doran, at the time of her mother's illness, was assistant vice president of McGraw-Hill-CTB. Doran says, "If only there was someone I could have called on to visit her." She realized then there were many in her mother's position who would love to have someone outside the family to visit and talk.

Established in 1953

The Alliance on Aging (then the Monterey Peninsula Coordinating Council for Older Americans) was in its embryonic stage. One of the numerous organizations that helped to get the Alliance started was The Clark Foundation. Established in 1953 by Willis W. Clark, Doran's father, it funded the Friendly Visitor program of the Alliance for two years. It was a very personal thing to Doran, who became one of the Alliance's early presidents in 1972, the year services were extended county-wide.

One of the Alliance on Aging's (AoA) earliest programs, Friendly Visitors offers companionship, shopping, transportation, telephone reassurance and escorted trips. In one year, its volunteers recorded 5,600 visit hours, 3,600 telephone contacts and 1,400 escorted trips. The program is directed to all older residents who may feel isolated or have other needs, with the aim of helping seniors remain independent as long as possible. Outside agencies are called upon as needed.

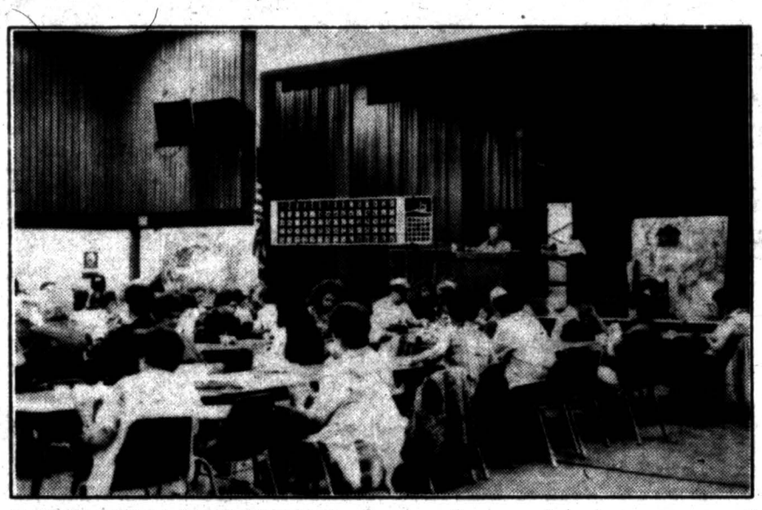
A major project and beloved tradition is the Senior Outreach Luncheon, held each Friday at the Pacific Grove Community Center, attracting participants from throughout the county. Run by volunteers sometimes referred to as "Novella's Raiders," headed by Novella Nicholson and Lee Alonso, who plan and prepare the lunch, which is livened by interesting lectures and entertainment.

Other services

AoA today provides other services that afford the companionship and activity so essential to health and well-being, as well as the basic needs for survival. Mobile Meal Service and Meal Connections luncheons are served at 12 locations throughout the county. Some 135,000 meals are served annually.

This writer has called upon the Alliance on numerous occasions. Ranking high along with Friendly Visitors, Information and Referral is one of my favorites. Its competent and friendly staff in Monterey and Salinas field some 37,000 calls yearly about services and activities available in this area.

Its staff makes close to 600 home visits yearly to evaluate needs, provides income tax and forms completion services and conducts a Senior Home



PARTICIPANTS SETTLE down for a brisk game of bingo, following the Alliance on Aging luncheon at Oldemeyer Center in Seaside held weekdays throughout the year.

Sharing program. Referrals to outside agencies numbered 3,648 in a single year.

Help wanted

What could be more important than finding jobs for those 55 and over who need to work? The Alliance subsidizes staff for local nonprofit and government agencies via its Senior Aides service. Salaries are funded by Washington, but overhead and administration costs come out of the Alliance budget. The AoA Job Bank, now back at the Alliance administration offices, is open three days a week to place seniors in private sector jobs.

Other programs include Health Insurance Counseling and Advocacy Program (HICAP), community education, speakers bureau, the annual Seniors Picnic at Toro Park, and innumerable special events and activities.

How it began

Vera Hering and Dr. Keith Merrill spearheaded the effort to form the Alliance in 1967 along with 30 representatives 15 organizations at the initial planning meeting. By 1970, Hering was elected temporary president. Merrill, who is still on the board, was elected board president.

The Alliance started its official existence with a bank account of $22. Hering was hired as full-time executive director in 1971 and reportedly turned back all or most of her salary to the treasury. The other paid employee was a part-time secretary. The staff worked out of a little office which Merrill was able to make available at Monterey Peninsula College.

Community organizations began to provide funds, as did local cities, county and federal governments. The yearly budget was in the low four-figure range. Some programs started by the Alliance spun off as separate entities, Others were added. Today, the scope of the organization is extensive, and because of the slump in the economy, the need for services is greater than ever.

Lee Chamberlin, current board president, and Ronald H. Curtis, executive director, both came to the organization three years ago. They make a good team. They have worked hard to improve efficiency, to raise funds and to increase the community's awareness of the Alliance's services.

The current crunch

In the 23 years of its existence, whenever older residents of the community had a need, the Alliance has tried to meet it. Now, your friend and mine, the Alliance, is in need. It has suffered a $300,000 shortfall in government funding over the past three years and at the end of the 1992-93 fiscal year was faced with the need to cut the yearly budget of $1.4 million by $125,000.

As of Oct. 1, the staff, which numbers 53, took an overall reduction in pay of 2.5 percent and was cut by 4 1/2 positions. That brought the number of staff cuts in recent years to 15. Development as a separate department was eliminated, managerial positions consolidated and other expenses cut. The top priority was to continue to serve seniors in Monterey County without a reduction in programs.

Curtis and Chamberlin pull no punches about the current crisis, and have appealed to the community for assistance.

"We may have to go back to the way we used to do it," Curtis said, "and that's with volunteers. We need money, but we also need volunteers to take responsibility for all programs — office help, greeters and servers at meal locations, friendly visitors.

HEARING FACT NO. 2

If your hearing is less than normal, then you're pretty normal.

Eighteen million other Americans have the same problem.
More persons suffer with loss of hearing than from diabetes, high blood pressure and arthritis combined! So although you are special, your difficulty is not.
Make sure your Family Practivce Physician knows about your hearing loss - however minor you may think it is. Most people can be helped through surgery, medicine or hearing aids.
If medicine or surgery is not your answer, you may benefit from a hearing aid. One of those new, advanced, miniature instruments more and more people are wearing.

Prime Time

PRIME TIME from page 15

He pointed out that already volunteers and board members are pitching in and that Chamberlin herself is devoting 30 to 40 hours weekly without pay. He calls for a partnership of program participants, staff and the community to get involved "...because federal and state money is drying up."

How can you help?

It's always rewarding to help a friend. You can help the Alliance and its thousands of recipients by telling others of the need and letting them know about services. Have lunch with a friend at one of the Meal Connections — it's a bargain. Overhead is fixed and more lunch patrons will help bring down the deficit. Volunteer; join the auxiliary; hold a fund-raiser.

Local churches and service clubs have already held fund-raising dinners and events to support the meal centers in their area. The United Way, which helps support the agency, is expected to do well this year.

Join the contributors. Membership is $25, but if you can't afford it your membership will still be honored. Larger contributions and estate gifts are welcomed. Keep in Touch, the news-filled newsletter, is included with membership.

The deadline for the Alliance to reduce its debt level by 50 percent is Jan. 1, 1994. At that time, if that goal has not been met, the administration and board will have to re-evaluate programs to determine if any cuts in service will be necessary.

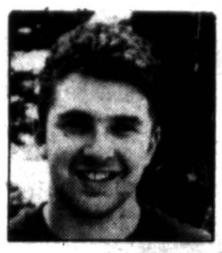
If you need help or wish to help, phone the Alliance on Aging Information and Referral, (800) 479-9123, 646-1458 or 758-2811. Contributions can be mailed to the administrative offices, 200 Glenwood Circle, Suite A-75, Monterey 93940.

Switching gears...

If mom could see me now! Prime Time is becoming famous. I looked forward with interest to the debut of the "Family Section" in The Monterey County Herald on Oct. 17. Lo and behold, its senior page is called, "Prime Time," the title we've been using at The Carmel Pine Cone since April.

I understand Prime Time is becoming a trend and an unnamed source at The Herald told me that in a few months, "...this will be happening all over the country."

Wow! Remember, you saw it first in The Pine Cone.



Campus Life

By JAMES GENONE

Woes of America's youth linked to poor role models

FOR AS LONG as I can remember, I have wondered why my generation has so many problems. Why do we take drugs? Why are we dishonest? We are we so disrespectful? Considering the high standards that are expected of kids these days, it seems odd that so many people my age are encountering difficulties.

When most adults observe these problems, they just shake their heads and look down upon the youth of America, and tell us how terrible we are. The simple fact is, if more adults were willing to step forward and show us how to grow up to be decent, upright people, with good morals, many of these problems wouldn't exist at all.

Obviously some responsibility has to fall on the shoulders of the kids. But for the most part, it is the job of adults to help kids make their decisions and, as they get older, teach them to deal with responsibility. Most children, no matter how intelligent and independent they are, end up having the values they observe in the adults around them.

Not everyone is so lucky

I personally have been very lucky. I have a father who has done an excellent job bringing me up, and I've had several teachers who have helped me when I've stumbled along the way. But not everyone is so lucky.

Many parents I know are less responsible than their kids. Parents tell their kids not to do drugs, yet they smoke an occasional joint when they think no one is watching. Others don't even know where their kids are on a given weekend, much less what they're doing. They simply don't bother to find out.

At a recent meeting concerning Carmel High School's newly proposed drug and alcohol policy, I was surprised to see some parents speaking out against drug use as though it was no problem for their family. Some of these parents spoke about how important it is to help kids with their problems —yet their own kids are known chronic drug users. You'd think they would deal with a problem in their own family before they preached elsewhere.

It isn't as though they aren't aware of their own families problems. Instead, they have chosen to ignore them, or they simply don't care. It's not that parents should be overprotective and deny their kids the right to choose, but at least they should take notice of what's going on in their kids' lives. They could then help their sons and daughters face some of the tough decisions they have to make during high school.

Some parents ignore issues such as sex and drugs entirely or, even worse, they take a firm "no" stance that forces kids to be dishonest. Every day people I know make mistakes in their lives because they didn't get any support from their parents. Discussing things openly can, in the long run, be much more beneficial to all involved. Too many kids are forced to deal with these problems on their own, and end up making bad decisions because no one was around to help them along.

But parents aren't solely at fault. Teachers tell us to get our work done on time, yet many students complain that some don't get around to correcting it for weeks. They mark us tardy, yet some often leave us waiting for five or 10 minutes while they get ready for class.

On TV, we see how great it is to do drugs, have sex at least three times a day with three different people — all of whom are married to someone else — and be as cruel and ruthless as humanly possible. Even our national leaders set a bad example for us by accusing each other of every crime under the sun and insulting each other's character during a campaign.

Obviously, there are a lot of adults who work hard to do the best for kids and, as a result, the kids whose lives they touch are happy and successful. These people know who they are and know that many of the problems mentioned above don't apply to them.

But everyone else ought to step back and take into consideration the way they treat young people. If my generation is going to be expected to act responsibly, adults need to be responsible for the example they set, because "do as I say, not as I do" just isn't going to fly.

If you're wondering why the youth of America has so many problems, take a hard look at the adults of America and you may find the answer.

event, according to committee member Pat Sippel, who, as of Tuesday, reported the event was $1,700 in the black.

One thing is sure: there was a record crowd, based on how many people were served food:406 adults, 166 children.

The parade featured community leaders, barbershop singers, Dixieland players and a variety of celebrants in a grand assortment of vehicles — from historic automobiles to antique fire rigs.

People watched from rooftops and balconies as the procession went by, and shopkeepers stood on the sidewalk to enjoy the crowded spectacle. Carmel was all abuzz.

Linking the Halloween Parade with the birthday party was one way to ensure the event would include all ages. Another was to start an annual program for honoring meritorious teenagers.

White honored Brittany Struve, a Carmel High School student, with a plaque — donated by Nielsen Bros. Market — for her 400 hours of volunteer community service.

With games, live music, prizes, a barbecue and a giant birthday cake, revelers at Sunset Center had plenty to occupy themselves with on the warm Sunday afternoon.

CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA RECREATION Department personnel and their friends made for a motley crew indeed as they cruised down Ocean Avenue.

THE BARBECUE crew worked fast and furiously in the Sunset Center parking lot to provide chicken dinners for the many people who attended the Halloween Parade and Birthday Barbecue.

Going home

THANKSGIVING WILL be here soon. That much is clear in Northwestern Washington. Trees are crimson and wild mushrooms are poking up from the forest floor. Leaves the size of placemats litter the streets.

When I return from my walk I'll make mom a tuna sandwich with the crusts trimmed off – just like she used to do when I was a kid.

I'm going to carve a pumpkin for her tonight too – one with a Star Trek face and huge pointed ears. In years past it was she who'd make Halloween and all the holidays so special.

Seems odd that our roles have shifted. Since dad died two and a half months ago and mom's cancer metastasized, everything has changed.

Fishing boats and yachts bob in the placid waters of Puget Sound. The last rays of sun have turned Mt. Baker pastel pink and a harvest moon grins through the cedars.

I walk and think about what to do for mother. What can I possibly do to make a difference? I want to hold her so tightly it will shake the cancer clean out of her system. But, so far, all she'll let me do is hug her.

Mom is a fighter. She has survived operations, chemotherapy, radiation, tests, experiments and indignities that would have made me crumble. But she sits in her bed, perky and pretty in a flowered robe, and talks about how she's going to lick this disease and take another cruise. And I intend to wave pom poms until she decides otherwise.

In the meantime, decisions must be made.

The word Hospice was terrifying to her at first. She wanted no help, thank you. She would manage herself. But a number of pains later, she stooped for a cane. And now she perambulates darn well with a walker. And when a wheelchair became inevitable, she learned to use one and abuse one. We found her spinning wheelies in the kitchen recently.

Tule fog has enshrouded the marshes and I pause at roadside to admire a red delicious tree with a spill of apples at its feet...

Actually, I'm grateful for the decisions my mom has already acceded to. Today, a home health aide from Hospice came smiling at the door. I listened from the kitchen to hear their conversation at bedside. "Sure, I'll trim those nails and shampoo your hair. You want to look your best for guests tomorrow," she chattered.

Yesterday, I observed an occupational therapist who showed mom how to use some nifty devices to retrieve objects and help her pull on her socks. She was gentle and cheerful.

We're talking about eventually having 24-hour in-home care. And I know that if ever mom needs to move to a Hospice facility, I'll move her to Monterey – to the Hospice House that will open its doors this Saturday.

The press release from Hospice of the Central Coast says the new 28-bed inpatient care center cost $8.5 million to build (so far, $7 million has been raised), is one of four of its type in California and one of very few in the nation. The 28,000 square foot building will have two patient care areas: one for those who need skilled nursing care or crisis management; and one for patients who cannot return to their homes due to a lack of caregivers. Some patients will use the house as a transitional recovery center between the hospital and home.

Actually, I have visited the current Hospice House in Carmel Valley. The rooms of the ranch-style home were filled with antiques, flowers and homey knick-knacks. And the staff related to the patients as if they were family.

Yes, I've learned far more about Hospice than I ever intended to. After I first learned mother had cancer, I went to Hospice's Monterey Peninsula Resource Center on Cass Street, where Sandy Larson obtained the latest computer printout on my mom's type of cancer. And the director, Laurette Toldi, spent time holding me while I cried about my sick parents.

Also, I worked part time in the development department at Hospice of the Central Coast for nearly a year. I interviewed nurses, home health aides, speech therapists, even the Reverend Bill Boyd. And I know our Hospice to be the greatest organization of knowledge and help for those with life-threatening illnesses.

One of my duties was to photograph the construction of the facility each month, and I watched it grow from steel girders and concrete columns to swirling expanses of windows and skylights. My last visit was a hard hat tour for donors where we looked at posh carpet and fabric samples. So I can't wait to see it

Saturday, decorated and landscaped with native flora. It's situated in the controversial woods at 100 Barnet Segal Lane. There are the latest conveniences for families who stay with their inpatient there, an entertainment center and even a playroom stocked with toys and games for young visitors.

The resource center, where I went for counsel and information so many times, will now be housed at the new Hospice House.

A wildlife theme is to be carried throughout...

I sit on mother's patio watching placemat leaves dance to the ground. An emerald mallard is bobbing in the little manmade pond at her condo...

It was mother who gave me my reverence for nature. And if I were her, I'd never want to leave this place called home – not for the fanciest Hospice in the world. So I'll try again today to find her a companion.

Maybe I'll get to see mom at Christmas time, when the cedar boughs sag with snow. Meanwhile, I'll continue to attend the Hospice bereavement group in Monterey where I can go talk about my dad, my mom, myself and learn more about how to sway with the passing seasons...

P.S. Hospice House is open at 11 a.m. Saturday. There will be a brief ceremony at 11:15 a.m. followed by an open house.

Carmel police maintain proper procedures were followed

Meanwhile, Poitras said officers "saturated the area," posted a patrol car at Carpenter Road and Highway 1 and issued a county-wide bulletin. Although officers stopped a motorist in Sand City who drove a similar vehicle, the search effort proved fruitless.

When Poitras was asked if he thought Carmel police officers did everything they could that night to apprehend the suspect, he said, "Given the conditions, yes. There's no doubt in my mind about that."

But Sakiz, who owns The Crossroads Jewelers, Inc., offered a slightly different version of the story.

According to Sakiz, the gunman was still in Kerry Lee's when Poitras and other officers arrived after being alerted to a robbery in progress. Sakiz said he saw the holdup taking place as he walked by and ran to his store to call police.

Sakiz said the robber was just leaving the store with a garbage bag full of jewelry as police arrived. Although Sakiz said he identified the man to Poitras as he walked to his car, he alleges Poitras failed to apprehend the suspect or even order him to stop.

"He (Poitras) walked across the street to the store," Sakiz said. "At that time, the robber walked out of the store, with a garbage bag in his hand which contained the jewelry.

SARKIS SAKIZ

"When I realized it was him, I yelled to Poitras, 'That's him, that's the guy.' He tried to approach the guy, but at that point, the robber hurried to his car, got in and drove away."

Sakiz said that while he was pleased with the quick response by officers and agrees with their decision not to open fire, he insists they could have stopped the suspect before he got to his car.

"We think there are other things they could have done," Sakiz said. "They should have some practice in dealing with this type of situation. They should know what to do.

"It's frustrating for us, because it feels like we are sitting here helpless," added Sakiz. "I felt like they could have caught this guy."

Carmel Police Chief John McGilvray issued a statement Oct. 29 in response to questions about why the suspect was not fired upon as he fled the scene.

The statement read, in part, "The police department's written policy prohibits the discharging of firearms at or from moving vehicles, except as the ultimate measure of self-defense, in defense of another, and only as a last resort.

"The primary concern of the department is the safety of our citizens. Suggestions have been made that warning shots should have been fired or tires shot out. Such actions would have greatly endangered the lives of the many innocent citizens in the area when the crime occurred."

According to Poitras, who noted there were between

FBI contacted, may become involved with investigation

30 and 40 bystanders near the scene, it would have been against department policy and foolhardy to fire on the suspect.

"Our primary goal is public safety," he said. "The potential for injury to the public was significant in that area. You don't just start shooting indiscriminately."

Additionally, the department sent out a nationwide teletype, which detailed the crime and provided composite sketches of the suspect. Poitras said he has received responses from police departments in New York, Oklahoma, and two California cities.

Poitras said the FBI also has been contacted: "It is possible they will become directly involved in the investigation."

He said Kerry Lee employees are in the process of compiling an inventory of the missing jewelry which will be entered into an FBI nationwide computer network of stolen property.

On Friday, Oct. 29, a private meeting was held at the Carmel Police Department, intended to quell fears among members of the business community who are concerned about the safety of their businesses. It was originally intended to be a public meeting at city hall.

According to Deborah Reate, who has been employed with Kerry Lee, Inc. for the last three years, she and owner Kerry Lee Johnson met privately with McGilvray and Captain Don Fuselier. The change in venue and format upset employees at Kerry Lee, who allege it was an attempt to cover up police inaction.

"We are very unhappy about that," Reate said, speaking on behalf of her employer. "The chief of police refused to have an inquisition of the incident. We feel they were just afraid to have our grievances made public.

"The grievance meeting was a washout because they never owned up to any error that was made by any of the four officers on the scene," Reate noted. "In fact, they were praising them. There was a lot of blaming outside but none on themselves. That's what we're frustrated about. At least they should own up to their mistakes."

Jeweler asks council — Are we safe in town?

By PAUL WOLF

KERRY LEE Johnson posed the definitive question to the Carmel City Council Tuesday evening.

If the Carmel police were following correct protocol Oct. 26, can he and fellow jewelers now expect to feel safe doing business in town?

"We want to know," Johnson asked the five-member council, "is there a game plan? What is the procedure the police will use if they know they are not going to use force (in such situations)?"

It was clear Johnson was not going to get quick answers on this particular evening.

Mayor Ken White and council members offered a few compassionate remarks, then explained that City Administrator Jere Kersnar will conduct an investigation of the armed robbery that took place that afternoon at Kerry Lee Inc. Kersnar will return to council with his findings, presumably by the December meeting.

"We are deeply concerned," said Councilman Bob Fischer. "The fact of an armed robbery in Carmel is shocking, primarily because there are so few of them."

Johnson was joined at the meeting by other jewelers, although he did most of the talking. They expressed fears that, should the details of the Oct. 26 incident become widely known, Carmel could become a target for similar such incidents.

Johnson said he now worries that would-be criminals will consider jewelry stores to be an easier and more lucrative hit than banks.

Reate said she would like to see an investigation conducted as soon as possible.

"We just want the truth to come out, and for people to feel safe again in the community."

According to Poitras, the purpose of the meeting was to inform jewelry store owners about the method in which the Carmel Police Department responds to such incidents, so that officers and business owners can work together more effectively.

Kirkor Kocek, who has owned Kocek Jeweler in Carmel for more than 20 years, said he invited more than 30 local jewelers to the meeting. He spoke on behalf of the Concerned Jewelers of Carmel, a coalition of jewelry store owners.

"We discussed how we can protect ourselves and the tactics we can use," Kocek said. "We want to facilitate communication among jewelers."

As for the prevalence of such crimes, Poitras said, "A serious robbery like this is a relatively rare occurrence in Carmel."

According to Poitras, the latest incident is only the third armed robbery this year within the city limits. Last year, he said there were seven, including three bank robberies.

"Of the seven last year, six were cleared by arrest," Poitras said. "Only one case remains open."

As for the prospect of arresting the gunman, Poitras said, "I don't know. We will do all we can to bring a successful conclusion to this."

Poitras noted there may be a connection between the robbery and a similar incident at Marchesa Jewelry in Pebble Beach in April 1992.

The suspect is described as a 35- to 45-year-old white male weighing 180 pounds, with straight brown hair with gray or blonde highlights that may have been a wig. He was said to have had a thin mustache and wire-rim glasses which Poitras said may also have been part of a disguise. He wore a white short-sleeve shirt with thin stripes, gray slacks and white running shoes.

Anyone with information about this crime is asked to call the Carmel Police Department at 624-6403.

Marcia McGinnis Shortt gives Cincinnati a 'vibrant look'

RIVERFRONT STADIUM on the Ohio River is home to the National Football League Bengals and Major League Baseball's Reds. The skyline of downtown Cincinnati can be seen in the background.

Former Carmel resident contributes to city's ascent as most desirable in U.S.

CINCINNATI from page 2

Boston Redevelopment Authority in Massachusetts for two years before moving to Ohio.

Hand carved

It didn't take her long to realize there wasn't a design department in Cincinnati, which has a population of 380,000 and a downtown area of about 10 square blocks.

"I approached the architectural department," she remembered, "and carved a niche for myself."

She convinced the head of the department that a staff graphic designer would be more financially advantageous than hiring out for individual graphic assignments.

Shortt made her point and, over the years, has worked to create a new city image with signs.

She noted how often people have remarked that her work has a distinct California influence.

"I think it's the bright colors I use, which is quite different for this conservative community," she added. "The city is becoming more modern with a fresh and vibrant look."

Some changes

Every year, Shortt returns to Carmel with her husband and two daughters, Nori and Lucy. She doesn't believe Carmel has changed that much, even though there are more people.

The most obvious changes she has noticed, however, are the increased number of T-shirt shops and art galleries and fewer service-oriented businesses. But, she observed that is not unique to Carmel. In the Hyde Park area where she lives in Cincinnati, the same phenomenon is occurring.

"I keep waiting for the return of a neighborhood shopping district," she said. "This type of transition seems to be universal. It's a flight to the suburbs."

The longer Shortt lives in Cincinnati, the more she thinks of Carmel.

"Every day, I drive to work along the Ohio River," she said. "It's not the Pacific Ocean, but it's nice to have the river, especially on foggy mornings when it reminds me so much of Carmel."

While Carmel is a long way from Cincinnati, Shortt's driving force is not deterred. Her current projects include parking signs for city and privately-owned garages and lots, a new sign program for the city's small airport for corporate jets, a renovation of Riverfront Stadium and a redesign of the maps for the downtown elevated Skywalk.

Shortt said future plans call for the possibility to build an aquarium and a convention center.

"Cincinnati is very green and hilly," Shortt said. "The seasons are not severe. We have wonderful street scapes, sidewalks with bricks and paving stones, and we are determined to make it even more desirable."

Apparently, that desire is beginning to bear fruit.

New CUSD board member will seek to learn more about issues

"I think it was hysterical," Dice said. "What can I say, the voters spoke."

Dice cited the 423 absentee ballots cast in her favor and name recognition as factors in the outcome: "I think a lot of people voted before I dropped out of the race."

Dice said she was "thrilled" at Yee Steck's victory and said her decision to drop out of the race was rooted in her belief that "Annette was a better candidate" than she was.

While Burch said he wasn't sure how the race would turn out, he wasn't surprised at the outcome. He said he was glad to have brought attention to issues that may have otherwise been ignored.

"What I wanted to do was to focus on some of these social issues that are so controversial – AIDS, condoms, sex education and substance abuse," Burch said. "I think I accomplished that. We kept those issues at the forefront during this whole election.

"What this election shows, I think, is how difficult these issues are for people to deal with," Burch added.

When asked how he felt about taking fourth place behind a candidate who had dropped out of the campaign weeks ago, Burch replied, "It shows that people aren't reading the issues and following the campaign."

Yee Steck said she doesn't plan to make waves in her newly elected position.

"I don't know that I'll go in there with any set priorities because I'm going to be part of a board," she said. "I think what's important is for me to get informed about what a board member should know, and for me to get up to speed on all the issues facing the district."

Yee Steck will be sworn in at a CUSD board meeting Dec. 9.

Rio Grill is Carmel's first smoke-free bar

RIO GRILL Restaurant and Bar on Rio Road is now designated as Carmel's first smoke-free establishment.

According to Rio Grill's owner, Tony Tollner, studies linking second-hand smoke to health problems contributed to the decision to completely eliminate smoking inside the restaurant as of Nov. 2.

Tollner stated the focus of Rio Grill is the enjoyment of great food and fine wines. He does want to compromise on the quality or health of the restaurant's customers caused by the negative affects of smoking.

The restaurant's dining area has been smoke free for about six months.

Customers are still able to smoke on the the outdoor patio.

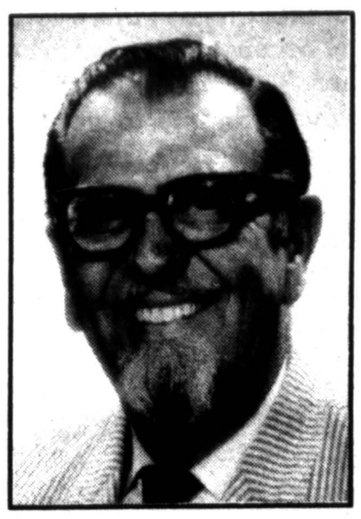
Obituaries



George Matchette

George Matchette of Carmel died of respiratory failure Oct. 21 at the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. He was 85.

Born in Hancock, Mich. on March 19, 1908, Matchette attended the University of Michigan where he received his A. B. Degree and also attended graduate school for medicine.

He was an instructor at West Coast School of Photography, Santa Barbara and the Winona School of Photography, Indiana. He received a Master of Photography Degree in 1959 and was elected to the American Society of Photographers in 1965.

Matchette also was a patent holder of photographic equipment. He was listed in Who's Who of the West in 1969, and was the owner of Heritage Studio in Redwood City.

He was a member of Professional Photographers Association of America, The Commonwealth Club of California, Rotary, Delta Upsilon and the Chico Country Club.

He is survived by his wife, Helen of Carmel; a son, Jon Jay Matchette of Carmel; a daughter, Bonnie Edmonston of Shasta County and seven grandchildren.

Private services will be held at a later date. His ashes were scattered at sea. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggest that any memorial contributions be sent to the Church of the Wayfarer or a charity of the donor's choice.

Mary Corcoran

Mary Margaret Corcoran, a Carmel resident, died at the Del Monte Rest Home in Monterey Oct. 11. She was 93.

Born in Pittsburgh, Pa. on July 20, 1900, she graduated from the Winchester School in that city and then the Ely School in Greenwich, Conn.

Corcoran served in the Women's Army Corps from 1942 to 1944 and moved to Carmel 25 years ago. She was a homemaker for 44 years and the official greeter at the Happy Landing Inn in Carmel for 10 years in the late 1970s.

She is survived by a nephew, Morrison M. Clements of La Habre and a niece, Shelia Baldwin of Chester , N. J.

At her request no services were held. Cremation was held at the Little Chapel By-the-Sea and her ashes were scattered at sea off Pt. Lobos. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Alta D. Brown

Alta D. Brown, a former Carmel resident, died Oct. 9 at Cherry Valley Health Care in Banning. He was 92.

Born Aug. 19, 1901, in Mansfield, Ill., Mrs. Brown lived in Riverside for 35 years and then moved to Carmel, where she lived for 16 years. She moved a year ago to Banning.

She is survived by a son, Lyman of La Quinta; six grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. Her husband, Lawrence, preceded her in death.

Private graveside services have been held. Burial took place at the Monterey City Cemetery. The Cortner Chapel in Redlands was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to the Hospice of the Central Coast or to the donor's favorite charity.

Elizabeth Corbett

Elizabeth H. Corbett, of Carmel Valley, a homemaker, died of heart disease Oct. 22 at Stanford University Hospital. He was 69.

Mrs. Corbett, who was known as Beth, was born on Jan. 5,1924, in San Jose. She had lived in Carmel Valley for five years, moving there from Moraga.

She worked as a volunteer at the American Cancer Society's Discovery Shop in Pacific Grove, was a member of the women's golf group at Rancho Canada Golf Club and was a former member of the women's golf club at the Contra Costa Country Club.

She is survived by her husband, James; a son, James III of Rancho Santa Margarita; a daughter, Colleen Abney of Martinez and four grandchildren.

Memorial services were held at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea. Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea and the ashes were scattered at sea off Maui. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to the American Cancer Society, 1184 Monroe St., Suite 1, Salinas, 93906.

George Flansburg

George Ivan Flansburg of Carmel died Oct. 28 at the his home.

He was 79.

Born on April 6, 1914, in Wichita, Kan., he moved to Carmel in 1977 from Bakersfield.

Flansburg worked as a counter person for Hector de Smet's Bakery in Carmel and then for Wishart's Carmel Bakery. He was known as "Mr. Carmel Baker" by many of the children in Carmel because he would always greet them at the bakery with a cookie while their parents shopped. He worked in the bakery until an illness forced his retirement last year.

He was active in local theater productions at the Wharf Theater, Forest Theater and the Monterey Peninsula College Theater. He also was a member of the Church of Religious Science and the Carmel Foundation.

He is survived by three sons, Lanny Stinson of Bakersfield; Gregory Flansburg of Pittsburg and Gary Flansburg of Lexington, KY; two daughters, Ivena Cotten of Bakersfield and Jannette Osborn of Lexington, KY; six grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Cremation was held at the Little Chapel By-the-Sea and his ashes were scattered at sea. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests any memorial contributions be sent to the Carmel Foundation, P. O. Box 1050, Carmel, 93921.

Albert Hales

Albert Hales, a former resident of Pebble Beach, died Oct. 19 at his home in San Francisco. He was 80.

Mr. Hales, who was known as A.J., was born on May 25,1913, in Philadelphia and moved to the San Francisco Bay Area with his family. He was raised in Alameda, graduating from St. Ignatius Preparatory School and in 1936 from the University of San Francisco.

Mr. Hales then took a job as a junior engineer for Hersey Inspection Bureau in Emeryville. In 1941 he became chief engineer of the company, a position he held until 1946. The following year Mr. Hales established his own engineering firm, A.J. Hales & Co. of Oakland. He and associate Frank Killinger eventually opened branches in San Jose, Sacramento and Monterey.

Mr. Hales was a life member of the American Society for Testing Materials, the American Society of Civil Engineers and the Engineers' Club of San Francisco. When he decided to sell his company in 1969, Mr. Hales retired to Pebble Beach, where he was a member of the Beach and Tennis Club and was active in the U.S. Pony Club and in fund raising for the U.S. Equestrian Team Inc. He later moved to San Francisco.

He is survived by his wife, Mary; a son, Stephen of Napa; a daughter, Sandra Clark of Tampa, Fla.; eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Episcopal funeral services were held at Noble Chapel at Cypress Lawn Memorial Park in Colma.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to Glide Memorial United Methodist Church, 330 Ellis St., San Francisco, 94102.

Catherine Ursula Mulrooney

Catherine Ursula Mulrooney, of Carmel, a homemaker, died Oct. 23 at Carmel Convalescent Hospital. He was 91.

Mrs. Mulrooney, who was known as Ursula, was born Jan. 16, 1902, in Hadleigh, England. She moved to Carmel in 1965 from Los Angeles.

She was a 1925 graduate of the University of California-Berkeley, and a member of the Carmel Woman's Club, Republican Women's Club and the PEO Sisterhood of Los Angeles.

She is survived by a daughter, Joyce Stewart of Carmel Valley; a son, Keith of Alexandria, Va.; seven grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. Her husband, Ernest, died in 1992.

Family services were held at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church in Carmel Valley. Cremation was held at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea, with inurnment at the church. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to the donor's favorite charity.

Carmel couple honored by family, friends

Salmonsens — 'Great neighbors'

PETE AND Gail Salmonsen of Carmel were the guests of honor at a recent surprise dinner party given by family and friends at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club.

The couple was honored for being "great neighbors," and always "being there" to help when needed.

The Salmonsens are widely known for their volunteer efforts in the community.

In appreciation for all of their kindheartedness, the popular couple was given two tickets for a cruise to Mexico.

JIM LANGLEY (standing) makes a tribute to Gail and Pete Salmonsen during the recent party honoring the Carmel couple.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

When does middle age begin, and how long does it last? A survey conducted for the American Board of Family Practice asked 1,200 people to identify the years of middle age. A majority chose the age span of 46 to 66. How do people in this age group feel about that? More than 80 percent of those in the suvey aged 46 to 55 said they consider themselves to be middle- aged. But others in this survey indicate that middle age can be a state of mind, rather than a matter of years: Eleven percent of those under 35 think of themselves as middle-aged — and so do 30 percent of those over 76!

In seven years of competing in 40 women's triathalons, she came in first each time. A championship triathalon can consist of a 2.4 mile ocean swim, a 112-mile bike race, and a 26-mile marathon run. After reigning as a champion of the 55-59 age group from 1985 to 1990, she isn't retiring. She competes now in her new age group.

The community comes together

IT WAS a perfectly natural pairing — the city's 77th birthday party and the Halloween Parade, linked together for the first time Sunday, Oct. 31.

We can expect the two to be joined as one in the years to come. And why not?

Town celebrations shouldn't be about one abstract thing, like a city's incorporation. No, they pay tribute to the breadth of community life — parenthood, the ties that bind the generations, the joys of small town existence.

Carmel Celebrates Community Committee has the right idea in its very name. The best town festivals know how to look forward and well as backward.

So we saw the tiniest of marchers — preschoolers — parading down Ocean Avenue, made up as bumble bees or princesses, creating what will some day become happy childhood impressions of Carmel. This is the best "investment" a city can make in its future.

A few paces behind were many of their older siblings. They will soon lose interest in parades, only to regain it with the arrival of their own children, many of whom will be dressed up for this same event.

Including everyone

Mayor Ken White found a way to include teenagers — who tend to be the "lost generation" when it comes to expressing wholesome small town sentiment. he honored CHS's Brittany Struve for her prodigious community service with the Spirit of Carmel Award.

Down at the parking lot at Sunset Center, longtime residents by the hundreds enjoyed a barbecue, participated in a cake-cutting ceremony and recalled Carmel of old.

Events like these add to the bank of communal memories, for young and old alike. In Pacific Grove, the citizens have learned something valuable long ago, from traditions like the Feast of Lanterns, Good Old Days and the Butterfly Parade. These celebrations do not just recognize history and community life, they are the very stuff of them.

Carmel didn't haye to go through the trouble of inaugurating an annual party, nor linking two separate celebrations. But the community is fast discovering its efforts are worth it.

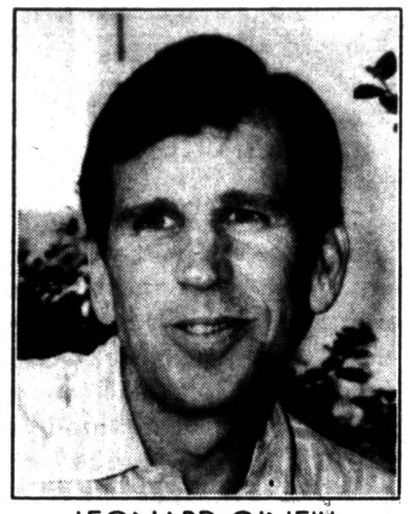
The Pine Inn works because 'we' do

ONE CAN measure the heart of a community by the amount of support its neighbors lend each other in times of adversity and uncertainty.

It took more than a long month for the elusive rumor to be finally confirmed — that Pine Inn was leasing its food and beverage facilities out to Marriott. The counterpunch was the subsequent company statement that the 50 workers were not made a part of the lease agreement. The recipe completed, the decision was now served up to the workers and the town.



LEONARD O'NEILL

It was then that time stopped for a moment for community contemplation! The hotel took care of itself, Marriott got its lease, and the workers got the part of a golf club that holds it together.

You see, the issue did not become union vs. non-union, or legal nonsense on whether there was a contractual breach, or wage increase vs. takeaways. No, what bothered and grouped the community together was the welfare of the longtime employees who help make up the graceful fabric of the village in Carmel.

The issue was simple, close and personal, not some problem that was oceans away in parts of the world we only see on TV. These were our people — Tony, Nick, Elsie, Oscar, Jessie, Ernie and the other 43 who one day reported to work and were told they would be terminated Nov. 7. They were told they would have to reapply and interview for their very same job with no guarantees.

Amid this uncertain backdrop — hundreds of local patrons voiced their concern: "The workers make the Pine Inn," "I go there because they remember me, and I feel special," "It's not 5-Star, but its Carmel - elegant and friendly, open yet protected, reassuring and inviting."

Groups and individuals called and voiced their opinions to the hotel and Marriott. More than 1,000 people so far have pledged to boycott if their workers were not rehired. After all, this is family business — the Inn is second home to many local residents.

This was further exemplified on Monday evening when close to 200 supporters showed up to participate in a candle-

'Padres' part of history

Dear Editor:

Thank you for your editorial (Pine Cone, Oct. 21) in which you question the motive of the present Carmel High School Associated Student Body in attempting to change the CHS mascot.

I believe I speak on behalf of most every student who ever attended Carmel High that it definitely would be a shame to end such a long-standing tradition, a tradition that goes back more than 50 years. I'm not sure exactly how it came about to select the mascot name back in 1940, but I know that my father, George Mosolf, who was the first coach and athletic instructor at the high school, must have had a say in the matter. And I know how proud he was to be a part of the Carmel High School Padres throughout his entire 30 years of coaching.

I will never forget my four years at CHS back in the '50s. It was such an honor to be able to attend one of the finest schools in the country. We were fortunate to have the brightest teachers, the most beautiful high school campus in the world, and the school spirit for the Padres could not have been more exciting.

Not only did the entire student body turn out to cheer on the Padres in sporting events, but so did most of the residents of Carmel, even those who did not have a student attending the school. Those were memorable years and will not be forgotten.

I just don't believe the present student body at CHS has the right to change a tradition that means so much to so many others, and I hope CHS alumni

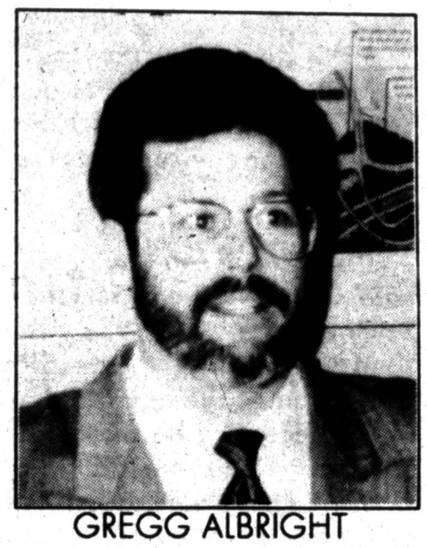
Carmel Commentary

By GREGG ALBRIGHT

Caltrans takes its mission seriously

ON SEPT. 8, 1993, the California Transportation Commission (CTC) found itself in a dilemma.

The question before it was as follows. Should the congestion problem on Highway 1 near Carmel be solved with a bypass through Hatton Canyon or a lower-cost alternative (widening) along the existing alignment?



GREGG ALBRIGHT

The Transportation Agency for Monterey County (TAMC) presented its position of unanimous support for the lower-cost widening if the savings could be used elsewhere within Monterey County. If savings could not be kept in the county, TAMC would continue supporting the Hatton Canyon Highway.

Caltrans could not support the proposed alternative (called "4/6," widening to four and six lanes) due to safety concerns, lack of long-term congestion relief and the resulting lack of cost-benefit. Caltrans continued to support the Hatton Canyon highway as the only viable solution.

No options

It could not support the bypass when the local community, represented by TAMC, wanted widening. Yet, it would not support the specific 4/6 plan as a proper use of public funds, considering its safety deficiencies and its inability to provide a long-term congestion relief.

The CTC had no choice but to delay action, giving Caltrans and TAMC 60 days to decide together if there was an existing alignment alternative that is both safe and cost effective.

Caltrans and TAMC staff have worked hard, exploring alternatives that would be both safe and a good use of public funds. Long hours have been invested testing one idea after another. TAMC staff must be commended on its enormous efforts to satisfy Caltrans' relatively restrictive engineering requirements.

Its healthy inquisitiveness strengthens the process, as TAMC staffers asked tough questions and demanded solid answers. Caltrans must always provide justification for its position.

Clash of perspectives

Why are there still different opinions among the professionals on what is the right solution?

Caltrans has concluded there are no safe and cost-effective existing alignment alternatives. TAMC disagrees. Perhaps its a matter of differing responsibilities.

This might be a good point to stop and reflect on what has happened. Here are some basic questions:

• Is there a serious problem on Route 1 near Carmel that must be addressed?

Congestion has a very serious impact on a community's quality of life, affecting the economic, social and environmental health of the community. This problem must be addressed.

• Who should address the problem?

Caltrans is fully responsible for the safe and effective use of the State Highway system. However, improving the system is not simply Caltrans' responsibility.

Caltrans will not and can not build a large project without TAMC's agreement. TAMC and Caltrans are true partners when it comes to funding new highway improvements.

Caltrans' mission is "to promote economic vitality and enhance the quality of life by providing for the mobility of people, goods, services and information...Caltrans must provide safe, efficient and effective transportation systems while being good stewards of limited transportation resources."

Based on this mission, it would be irresponsible for Caltrans not to address State Route 1's congestion problems.

• Is the agency's approach to the problem reasonable, sensible and responsible considering its mission?

Some have criticized Caltrans' approach. From their perspective, Caltrans has not been reasonable.

Please consider Caltrans' actions in light of its mission. Caltrans is obligated to provide safe, effective and efficient mobility. If a project would be unsafe, Caltrans cannot built it. If it would be ineffective in solving a problem, Caltrans cannot move forward with it. If a project is an inefficient use of limited dollars, we would not be good stewards of public funds if we invested in it.

• Is the agency listening to the many community concerns and being responsive to its needs?

Please recognize that Caltrans has participated in hundreds of public meetings and workshops for the very purpose of learning more about the public's needs and desires. Extraordinary efforts have been made by both Caltrans and the public to improve mutual understanding of the varied and divided concerns of this community.

We can all agree no one can satisfy all the people all the time. Yet, to the degree feasible, considering its mission, Caltrans has attempted to incorporate community concern whenever feasible.

• What is the right thing to do?

There are no simple solutions for a complex problem like this. Any genuine solution will be a bitter pill to swallow. Any short-term solution — which might be an easier pill to swallow — would not eliminate the need to face the final solution (the freeway) later.

Based on Caltrans' mission, there is less overall environmental impact, reduced public cost and greater service to the community by facing the final solution now.

As we find ourselves returning to the California Transportation Commission on November 17, we are not a united community. Even if we all do not agree on what is the appropriate solution, I hope this information helps you better understand why Caltrans makes the decisions it does.

light vigil. Almost half of the supporters were locals displaying their support for the workers by singing and participating in the rally.

It is refreshing indeed to live in a community that cares about its people, their families, and its workers... a community that places value on friendship above the bottom line and is willing to sacrifice by not visiting the home of a longtime friend until the sunlight of the spirit provides some enlightenment.

The Pine Inn-Marriott tag team shreds corporate social contracts. The 50 Pine Inn workers never wanted something for nothing. What they do want is a fair chance — a chance to keep on providing for their families, to have a good job at good wages... after all, that is our country's promise.

The agreement was that if they gave their all, stuck with the company, increased production and reputation, they'd share in the gain. Now it appears someone took the gain, left the workers with the pain — just another cost to cut.

Drama not complete

The drama is not yet complete thanks to the community and your concern. Marriott knows of our strong feeling and commitment. Whether they choose to ignore us or bring back a portion of the workers to placate us remains to be seen.

But, for us workers, we know that Carmel is not just a haven for visitors but a village that cares, a family that endures, a mother bear who fights to protect her cubs, a group of citizens united who take pride in who they are and what they stand for.

Often, it is not enough to let local business know what we stand for. We've got to let them know what we won't stand for.

ASSEMBLY RACE: MCPHERSON UPSETS PATTON

The Pine Cone's Q & A with Bruce McPherson

WITH BRUCE McPherson's upset victory over Santa Cruz County Supervisor Gary Patton, a longtime observer of politics is about to become a major participant.

With his victory, the retired newspaperman plans to open an Assembly office in the Monterey area within two weeks. But not long after he will need to consider his bid for re-election, since McPherson replaces Sam Farr midway through the Democrat's two-year term. The primary will be in June, the runoff in November.

For now, the 49-year-old Republican takes time out to look back on the campaign, and forward to the challenges that face a freshman legislator in Sacramento.

BRUCE MCPHERSON

Pine Cone: It is hard enough to begin a new term as Assemblyman. How disruptive will it be to to know you are going to have to get right back on the campaign trail?

McPherson: Eight months from now, when the June primary comes up, people will ask, "What have you done?" (Laughs) I need to be realistic in what I can do. I'd say it won't be that disruptive, but there is no letting up. Even without campaigning in a two-year Assembly seat, there is no letting up.

We are already having meetings (about re-election). I imagine we'll take a long weekend (to rest), but that's about it.

Pine Cone: Some people have looked upon your victory as a surprise. Talk about what must have gone right for you in order to win this race.

McPherson: We had to establish a good basic campaign strategy and organization, and we did accomplish these.

There are very few districts that are won by a political party that has only about 30 percent of the registration. The Democrats had about 52 percent -- so that was a lot of ground for us to make up.

We knew we couldn't win with only the Republican Party. And it had to be a moderate Republican who would seek this seat. We knew in the primary we had to get a broad base of support. So we went after Independent and Democratic voters.

Pine Cone: How specifically did you target Monterey County?

McPherson: Well, it was (Republican State Sen.) Tom Campbell who put the bug in my ear to run — a year ago Labor Day, when he said, "We need some good moderate Republicans to run. Why don't you do it?" He was talking about Congress then, but my interests were local government and education primarily.

I started meeting with people after the first of the year, not just in Santa Cruz County, but in Monterey County. I began making trips to Monterey a couple times a week. That increased to four or five times a week over in the last few months of the campaign. We'd meet with people from all political persuasions, and it was a long and consistent effort.

Pine Cone: Discuss the message you believe you were able to get across, and what was the statement we have now heard from the voters in electing you over Gary Patton?

McPherson: I believe I was the more open and accessible candidate who believes in the slogan, "Jobs and the environment can go together."

The economy was the main issue, and I think the voters looked to me as the one to make it work.

But I am very cognizant of the value of the natural environment we all enjoy. The people in the district need to know I seriously consider myself an environmentalist. I love it here. I love to have my children live here.

But human beings are part of this environment too. When they have jobs and can provide for themselves and their families, they feel much better about themselves. The state has to become more business-friendly.

Pine Cone: The campaign did get a little bit 'intense,' to use a bland word. Some Democrats have commented that you were able to win because you focused on turning Democrats off to the process and using "hit pieces." How do you assess the tone of the campaign?

McPherson: Yes, it turned negative toward the end. But you can look back and ask, Who was trying to get off the central issues? Personal wealth, 1040 tax forms — which aren't required.

We focused on the issues, and Gary Patton wasn't able to make any (charges) stick. There was negative campaigning, but (Gary) doesn't have to look further than his own campaign to find that.

Pine Cone: What specifically are you going to do to make yourself an accessible Assemblyman?

McPherson: My thought is to have regular meetings and constituent hours. I need to make a continuous effort to become better known, particular in Monterey County. I can't say what my timetable will be like because I don't know where my office will be. But that will be decided within the next 10 days to two weeks. I will make a consistent effort to attend as many functions as I can and be visible in the area; that's called politics.

Pine Cone: Have you been a little bit loose with the term environmentalist? Shouldn't we keep clear lines between these issues — natural resources, jobs, economy?

McPherson: We need a balance in our community to allow people the opportunity to succeed. I don't at all favor plowing over every valley or forest. Few people could 'out-environmentalize' Gary Patton, but we really suffered some severe consequences.

Pine Cone: Specifically?

McPherson: ...Undue delays, technicalities and regulations — all of which can be simplified without meaning the environment is going to be second-rate in this area.

Pine Cone: Did you agree with him when Patton said, "Our environment is the basis for our long-term prosperity?"

McPherson: I didn't disagree with that. The protection of the environment in this area is absolutely necessary because the base of our economy, agriculture and tourism in particular — and education, which is a big industry — depends upon a clean environment. If we can't protect our environment, we are not going to prosper in those industries.

Pine Cone: On the subject of Fort Ord, do you see any disadvantages being a Republican working with a bunch of Democrats on the reuse of the army property?

McPherson: I take it the other way — the glass is half full (without Republican involvement).

I think having a Republican pushing the issue can just give it more broad-based support. Remember, this is not a partisan issue at all. This is just common sense that we have to work together to see what will happen at Fort Ord. I know I can work well with (State Sen.) Henry Mello and (Congressman) Sam Farr.

The reuse is an immense plan, with the basic strategy to have a university and a marine science center located there. I know the importance of the whole conversion process.

Pine Cone: Gary Patton spoke of his having many contacts at all levels of government. You are truly going to be the new kid on the block. How are you going to get the connections you need?

McPherson: During the campaign — over the last 10 months — and then in the newspaper business, I have been able to develop many contacts throughout the area — in the global governmental circles and local business circles, and also in Sacramento. I think I've shown during the campaign that I can work with a broad-based coalition of different interests and get things done.

Nevertheless, I think the voters of the district were tired of professional or career politicians. What they've really wanted is someone new who is willing to stick out his or her neck.

Sacramento-bound McPherson top vote-getter in both counties

The Patton-McPherson race began low-key, but became highly charged, particularly during the last two weeks, when the "hit pieces" began clogging the mail.

"There were seven pieces of mail in five days from the McPherson camp," said Patton campaign coordinator Andre LaFleur as the early returns Tuesday evening did not look good for his candidate. "Part of McPherson's tactic was to get people (registered Democrats) so turned off by the process that they would stay home."

Nevertheless, the accusations flew from both sides. Patton's pledge to refuse political action committee money never captured the electorate's imagination as he might have wished, and it may even have backfired. McPherson accused his opponent of "hypocrisy," as he focused on the tens of thousands of dollars being channeled into Patton's campaign by the Democratic Party, which is not a PAC but does receive money from PACs.

From late reports, both candidates are expected to have raised in the neighborhood of $300,000. From a Carmel Pine Cone check of campaign disclosures, it appeared McPherson's PAC contributions would still constitute a fraction of his overall contributions.

Patton's experience and obvious debate skills — polished by many terms at the board of supervisors — didn't have enough chance to shine. Despite Patton's specific ideas for economic recovery, McPherson hammered on his opponent as having a record of "anti-business" policies and votes.

Meanwhile, McPherson, a moderate Republican, worked on his name recognition in both Monterey and Santa Cruz counties, and apparently managed to capture the political center. McPherson was the top vote-getter in both counties.

Other election news

Other highlights from Tuesday's election included:

• Annette T. P. Yee Steck, an investment banker specializing in public school finance, decisively defeated top challenger Jim Kistenmacher in a race for a two-year seat of the Carmel Unified School District Board of Trustees. (See complete story, plus full election results on page 14.)

• John Floyd and Paul Beemer, incumbents on the Carmel Area Wastewater District board, were re-elected for the fourth time.

They fended off challenger John Thodos, 59, a Carmel architect who was attempting to shake up what he viewed as a complacent district.

Floyd, 78, and Beemer, 81, received 2,020 and 1,976 votes respectively, to Thodos' 1,593.

• Don Freeman and Sherman Smith were re-elected to four-year terms on the Monterey Peninsula College Board of Directors.

Freeman, who has held a seat on the board for the past 16 years, is Carmel City attorney. Smith, a retired Army major and civil servant, has been a member of the board for 28 years.

• Prop. 174, the school voucher initiative, was defeated by a greater than two-to-one margin, with 69.7 percent of California voters opposing it.

RLS sets sights on PG after blanking Padres

Pirates punish Carmel, 21-0; focus on playoff possibilities

By GARTH MERRILL

WHEN ROBERT Louis Stevenson hosts Pacific Grove on the gridiron Saturday, there will be more at stake than the chance to put together a two-game winning streak in Mission Trail Athletic League play.

If Stevenson can win its final two games — against PG and Alisal — it will finish league play with a 3-2-1 record and have a chance to do something it hasn't done in 10 years — compete in the Central Coast Section playoffs.

"That provides us incentive beyond winning our last two games," said Jeff Young, RLS head coach.

Three teams from the MTAL typically qualify for CCS competition, and Stevenson, 1-2-1 in league play, trails third-place Gonzales and Alisal by one-half game.

"It's been a goal since the beginning," Young said of the Pirates' drive for the playoffs. He said his team has focused on that playoff possibility all season.

"It's a real motivated group...very success-oriented," Young said.

To end the season with a winning record and have a chance at the playoffs, RLS will first have to beat the Breakers in Saturday's 2 p.m. game in Pebble Beach, then dispense with Alisal on Nov. 13 in another home game.

Help from the Padres?

Ironically, the Pirates could use a little help Saturday from Carmel, the team they disposed of Saturday, Oct. 30. Carmel plays host to Gonzales on Saturday, and a Padres' win, combined with a Pirates' victory, would significantly boost RLS' playoff hopes. It could then theoretically control its own destiny.

SKIP LIND, Robert Louis Stevenson senior split end, sprints down the sideline following a reception in Saturday's win over Carmel High. Padres' junior defensive back Brandon Glanville prepares to run Lind out of bounds.

The Pirates, 4-3-1 overall, used their punishing defense to pick up their first league win against the Padres last Saturday at Bardarson Field, 21-0. It was the fourth defensive shutout this season for RLS. In fact, excluding its 42-6 thumping by MTAL champion Palma, Stevenson has outscored its opponents, 172-60, this season.

The Carmel game also marked the second week in a row the Pirates had to face a run-and-shoot offense. To prepare for Pacific Grove (1-3, 3-4), RLS will have

Defense stands tall, but offense stymied as CHS stopped by RLS; Gonzales here Saturday

DEFENSE WAS the deciding factor Saturday afternoon at Bardarson Field, and Robert Louis Stevenson got the better end of a game that was closer than the final score indicated.

The Padre defense limited Stevenson to two touchdowns, one of which came on a well-executed drive in the first half, and the other which came late in the fourth quarter to seal the 21-0 final score.

Other than those two drives, RLS was quiet offensively. The Carmel defense played well, stopping the Stevenson rushing attack and controlling its passing game.

The only other RLS touchdown came on an interception return in the first half. Despite the excellent defensive effort, the Padres fell apart on offense. The Padres, who are capable of putting big numbers on the scoreboard, made things easy for RLS by digging themselves into a hole with penalties and a lack of execution.

In addition, a lot of credit should be given to the Pirate defensive line. Carmel's pass protection, which is usually excellent, broke down against RLS. Carmel quarterback John Geisler was often hurried into errant passes or forced to scramble.

The loss of injured wing back Ben Thompson also showed, as it allowed the Pirates to double team Carmel's other leading receiver, Dustin Nagai. With Geisler constantly harried by Stevenson linemen, it was impossible for the offense to get anything going.

Although the Padres several times came within striking distance of the end zone, the inability to score, which has haunted Carmel all season, proved to be the difference.

Gonzales next foe

The Padres (0-4 in Mission Trail Athletic League play and 2-6 overall) hope to pick up their first league victory Saturday as they host Gonzales in the school's homecoming game. Gonzales, 2-2 and 3-5, are coming off a good performance, albeit in a 31-14 loss to league champion Palma.

MTAL tennis titles swept by surging Santa Catalina

THE SANTA Catalina Cougars captured both the singles and doubles tennis titles at the Mission Trail Athletic League Championships Oct. 29 at Carmel Valley Ranch.

More good news followed as Sharon Osgood, Santa Catalina's assistant coach, was voted MTAL Coach of the Year by her peers at the tourney. She shares the honor with Alisal's Mike Griffith, with whom she split the vote.

On the court, Catalina junior Marisa Maclennan of Carmel defeated Robert Louis Stevenson's Lindsay Colker 6-2, 6-2 to take the singles championship. The match was the third meeting between the two this season and the first time Maclennan has come out on top.

The Catalina freshman duo of Ashlee Ferlito and Lisa Walgenbach dominated Stevenson's Briana Shafer and Jayme Colker to win the doubles championship 6-0, 6-0.

"I wanted them to be really concentrated, and they were," said Catalina head coach Sherry Blair, who was especially pleased with Maclennan's ability to turn the tables on Colker, the championship's No. 1 seed.

All three Cougars qualified for the singles and doubles Central Coast Section Championships to be played at Carmel Valley Ranch on Nov. 17-18.

The CCS Team Championships will be held Nov. 10 at a site to be selected by draw the day before. If Catalina draws hosting duties, the tournament will be at Chamisal Tennis Club, Blair said.

RLS 'focused' on playoff possibilities to get back to the basic roots of football.

The Breakers' Quincy Scott, the top rusher in the MTAL, chewed up 101 yards of turf last week in PG's 35-20 loss to King City.

"We have to shift our thinking and get ready for a ground game, prepare for a more balanced attack," Young said.

If Stevenson reaches the playoffs it will be experience that gets it there. The squad has 17 seniors and 10 juniors on its roster. Young said most of his players have been playing together since their freshman year.

"I think that's why they're so close to each other," Young said. "Most of them are such good friends that they'd cut off their right fingers for any of the others if they had to."

Young observed the Pirates are too seasoned to take any opponents lightly.

"They know not to look past anybody, to take it one game at a time," he noted. But at the same time he said the team has never taken its eyes of its playoff goal.

"It is a very focused group."

Padre Sports Scene

Kickoff for the varsity game is 2 p.m.

• Cross-country

In the middle of a week-long vacation where several team members were out of town, the Padre runners took on Santa Catalina and Pacific Grove in a dual meet Oct. 28.

The Padres lost to both teams in both boys and girls competition. The girls were lead by Denise Cardamon, Jennifer Eyerman, Lili Woytak, Adele Woytak and Georgia Benigni. Continuing the trend they have shown all season, these runners improved on their past times.

On the boys side, Bart Rowley was second to cross the finish line, and he was followed for Carmel by Jason Kistenmacher, Mike Gulla, Brian Johnson and Rushad Eggleston. Improvement has become the norm for the Padres, who are coached by coached by John Ables, Tom Clifford and Robert Claesson.

• Water Polo

The Padres moved back into second place with their 16-13 victory over Hollister Tuesday, Oct. 26. The win put Carmel into a tie with the Haybaylers, which will be broken at the league championships Nov. 12-13.

The Padres were lead by the scoring of Kyle Nichols, Mike Allaire, Steven Bonanfant and Micah Lande. In that they are gearing up for the Central Coast Section playoffs, this was an important win for the Padres.

Carmel will finish off its season on Monday, Nov. 8 when they will play Robert Louis Stevenson and "take back Highway 1 for the football team," said Lande in reference to RLS' 21-0 victory over CHS on the football field Saturday.

Pirate Sports Scene

let their actions on the football field speak for themselves. For the first time in four seasons, the Pirates came up big and defeated Carmel, 21-0, last Saturday on the Padres' home field.

Even though Stevenson's defense rose to the occasion, Carmel's defense was tough as well as it held RLS to only two running plays that gained more than six yards. Fortunately for the Pirates, those two were touchdowns.

In the third quarter, senior JB Williams scored on a 9-yard run up the middle and Mike Prowell blew into the end zone on a 27-yard jaunt with only 3 1/2 minutes left in the game.

Even though quarterback Tom Orradre didn't throw or run for any touchdowns on offense, he intercepted a pass from Carmel quarterback John Geisler and ran it back for a 38-yard touchdown late in the first quarter to give RLS a 7-0 advantage.

Stevenson's defensive line harassed Geisler throughout and collected five sacks compared to Carmel's one. The sacks were recorded by Matt Miller, Josh Bonifas, Jeff Danner, Williams and Scott King.

"We put a lot of pressure on Geisler," said Miller, RLS senior defensive back. "He could have really hurt us."

On offense, seniors Ted Lim (two catches for 50 yards) and Skip Lind (one reception for 32 yards) shined. Once again, Leland Felsenthel was perfect on the day with three PAT's.

Next up for Stevenson is the Pacific Grove Breakers in a 2 p.m. game Saturday in Pebble Beach (see separate story above for details).

In the frosh-soph game last Saturday against Carmel, Brandon Sams stood out in an otherwise tough day for RLS. Sams gained 160 yards and scored on a 15-yard run in a 35-6 loss.

The RLS-PG junior varsity game kicks off at 11:45 a.m. Saturday.

• Girls' Swimming/Diving

Kim Clark, Brooke Gaw and Breen Murphy have qualified for the Central Coast Section post-season action. The trio have paced Robert Louis Stevenson to a 4-3 record with wins over Alisal, Pacific Grove, Hollister and Salinas.

For the upcoming CCS championships, the three girls qualified in these categories: Clark — 100 and 50 freestyle; Gaw — 500 free; Murphy — 500 and 200 free and 100 breaststroke.

The team also had their quiet leaders who showed dedication:

— Jenn Powell dropped 25 seconds in her 500 freestyle time in the meet against Catalina;

— Carli Sumida, who was the workhorse of the team competing in swimming and diving; and — Samantha Topol, who has steadily been improving since last season.

On the diving side, Alex Diamond achieved a first-place score in every meet this season. Coach Rob Klevan predicts she will the league championship this season.

The Pirates' junior varsity team, which racked up a 6-1 record, were paced by Caroline Armitage, Karri Atherton and Lynn Pamiano.

BEAT THE EDITOR

EVERY WEEK during the football season, Doug Thompson, managing editor of The Carmel Pine Cone, will challenge a guest forecaster in picking the top 10 games from the pro and collegiate slate.

LAST WEEK: The Editor's upset pick of the week – the underdog New York Jets over New York Giants – came through, which enabled him to defeat Pamela Norton, owner of Mid Valley Travel. It was a tough week for both forecasters as The Editor finished at a mediocre 5-5 to prevail by one game.

THIS WEEK: The next challenger is Marie Ishida, principal at Carmel High School. Marie will try to sidetrack The Editor, who is now 5-2-2 this season.

Singer Larkin: 'I know I've chosen the right road for me'

By JT MASON

PATTY LARKIN, an exceptionally talented singer and songwriter, will be appearing in concert at 8 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 13 at the Kuumbwa Jazz Center in Santa Cruz. Larkin just released her fifth solo album, Angels Running, on High Street Records, a division of the Windham Hill label. Recently, she took time out from making music to discuss the evolution and future of her career.

Patty Larkin in concert
8 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 13
Kuumbwa Jazz Center
Santa Cruz

According to Larkin, music has long been a familial passion. "Both my grandmothers were very musically oriented and both taught piano. One was a church organist and choir leader and the other grandmother was like the party woman of Chicago. She knew all the popular songs and played for silent movies. Apparently you were set if you invited her to a party because she could play nonstop for four or five hours."

Hid with the guitar

Larkin herself took up the guitar in junior high school. "The guitar was more personal than the piano. I could hide with it, take it to my room, shut the door and be by myself during my early adolescence. There was also a degree of excitement and discovery that really drew me to the instrument. I didn't know a lot of chords so I'd have to make them up."

In her last year at the University of Oregon, Larkin decided to pursue music as a career. "I was studying English, getting my teaching certificate and playing at coffeehouses. One day I was at a local high school and I saw a guitar book from the Berklee College of Music. I brought it home and started teaching myself how to read music. It really grabbed me."

After a short stint as a substitute teacher in Eugene, Oregon, Larkin moved to Boston to study for a summer at the Berklee College of Music. While there, she performed with a combo including congas and flute that eventually expanded into more of a band format performing Brazilian and Big Band jazz.

'Getting people to dance'

"After that phase I went into a rock and roll, r&b band for a couple of years. The hard thing for me as a songwriter was that everything had to have a dancing, pulsing beat. We were trying to earn a living, which meant getting people to dance and have a good time. Anything that had a folk or Celtic feel had to be edited out. I found that really difficult after a while and decided to go solo. That was in 1982."

Getting into the acoustic music circuit was harder than Larkin had expected. "There was a lot of competition for just a few gigs. I think that it still is competitive but there are more opportunities now.

Larkin is a skilled and versatile songwriter. Her writing is intimate and vulnerable one moment, defiant and spirited the next. "I work at songwriting. When I'm at home I make an effort to put the time in and that's what it seems to take for me. I try to write one or two

Medieval evening offers almond omelettes and jousting knights

THE WELSH Society's 'Medieval Evening in Wales' benefit will offer renaissance music, jesters, costumes and a feast fit for a king.

"A MEDIEVAL Evening In Wales" benefit for the Alliance on Aging Auxiliary will be presented by the Welsh Society of the Monterey Peninsula on Saturday, Nov. 6th at All Saints' Church in Carmel.

For this singular event, the church hall will be transformed into a Camelot setting, with King Arthur and his entourage presiding over a fun-filled evening.

Featured will be an eight-course feast consumed medieval style - with fingers. Finger towels and large napkins will be provided to preserve milady's and milord's dignity and clothing. Serving persons will be wearing appropriate medieval costumes.

The honored Lady and Lord for the evening, Virginia Stanton and Bud Allen, promise to add to the evening's merriment and pageantry.

Dress for guests is optional, but in keeping with the spirit of the evening, they are encouraged to wear costumes of their choosing.

Catering consultant and college instructor of international cuisine, Mary Chamberlin, will be producing elegant medieval delicacies starting with almond omelette appetizers and concluding with a surprise pie "fit to set before the king."

There will be continuous entertainment throughout the banquet. Music for the evening includes harpist Amy Krupski, as well as lyric soprano Mary Margaret Graham singing traditional Welsh folk songs. Renaissance music will be provided by the La Mi La Sol Consort group, and Steve Payne will be playing medieval tunes on the penny whistle. Welsh songs will be performed by the Welsh Society's men's and women's choir.

Jesters will add to the fun, along with an armored-knights" battle staged by the Society for Creative Anachronism, Inc. The banquet will begin at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $100 per person. Information is available by calling 648-1926 or 626-8661.

Portofino Cafe 'very likely' will shut down

By JOHN DETRO

FOR THE past eight years, Portofino Cafe has been a performance venue and meeting place of area-wide significance. Owner Barbara Murphy now says she "very likely" will "shut down" the operation "and forget the sadness of it."

Last month's announced move into new and larger quarters — at the refurbished Grove Theater on Lighthouse Avenue in downtown Pacific Grove — did not occur as planned.

The statement about closure came this week as Murphy explained from her viewpoint how the once-sweet notion went sour.

It's necessary to know the major players. Developer Greg Beardsley owns Pacific Grove Plaza, Portofino's present home, where Murphy has a lease through April 1995.

Les Rudas of Carmel oversees the project at the old Grove Theater for his uncle, Pebble Beach's Tibor Rudas, producer of opera giant Luciano Pavarotti's arena concerts.

Proposal made

"I submitted a proposal (to the Rudas interests) about rent and other criteria," Barbara said tearfully during a telephone interview.

"It was my understanding that they would pay the utilities. As the time to move in drew near, the uncle said he never agreed to that. I had expenses of about $10,000 — architect's drawings, permits, starting to hire a contractor — without

National Native American Month

■ Celebration will include dancing, food, pony rides

A CELEBRATION of National Native American Month — "One Earth, One People, We Are All Related" — will be held Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 6 and 7, at Presidio of Monterey's recreation center.

The event was organized by the Presidio and the San Juan American Indian Council. It will run from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. both days.

Noting that admission is free while pony rides will cost 50 cents apiece, council spokespersons emphasize that the weekend's festivities will showcase "the rich diversity and wisdom of Native American culture."

Featured will be Xipe Totec Aztec Dancers, Kelly Looking Horse Lakota Dancers, Pomo singer Bernice Torres, Tawantinsuyo Condor People singers and dancers, as well as native authors Eagle Wolf and Bluebird Woman. Various artists, storytellers and speakers will also participate.

According to its organizers, "This festival also celebrates the 500-year reunion of the North American Eagle People and the Condor People. A traditional ancestral altar will honor the Native American Day of the Dead to remember ancestors who have passed on."

Activities for children will include an International Children's Tipi Circle, Friendship Dance and the aforementioned pony rides. The dance will take place at 1 p.m. on both Nov. 6 and 7.

"Children are encouraged to wear their ethnic clothing," organizers stated. "They will be invited to imprint their painted hands and write their names on one of the four tipis, which symbolize the four races of humanity and the four cardinal points."

Local environmental groups will set up information booths, and tree-planting ceremonies will occur both days. Anyone can help plant one of the donated Monterey pines. The ceremony will be conducted by medicine woman Bernice Torres.

During the festival, the San Juan American Indian Council Women's Circle will hold the Infants to Elders Holiday Benefit Drive for the Pineridge and Rosebud Reservations in South Dakota. Contributors are asked to bring new toys, clothing and blankets.

Packages should bear a label describing the contents, and name and address of the donor. Cash donations will be accepted to defray the cost of transporting the gifts in time for Christmas.

The gathering will take place rain or shine. The recreation center is at Building 843, near the end of Mason Road. Information is available by telephoning 647-5447.

DAVID NANEZ will participate in Native American festivities this weekend at the Presidio in Monterey.

MEL ULRICH and Denise Owen star in Opera San Jose's production of 'Tartuffe'.

'Shamelessly appealing' farce will open Nov. 13 for Opera San Jose

OPERA SAN Jose will present Tartuffe, or The Con Man, written by Bay Area composer Kirke Mechem, on Saturday, Nov. 13.

Tartuffe, commissioned and premiered by the San Francisco Opera in 1980, drew large audiences and positive reviews. The Los Angeles Times called the opera "immediately accessible and shamelessly appealing."

The title character is a deceitful imposter who poses as a religious zealot, duping a wealthy merchant into signing over all his worldly possessions, and then attempting to marry his daughter and seduce his wife.

Tartuffe will be conducted by Barbara Day Turner and directed by Daniel Helfgot. This production is a revival, newly built from the original designs by Ken Holamon (sets) and Elizabeth Poindexter (costumes).

The title role will be sung by David Cox and Mel Ulrich, the wife, Elmire, will be sung by Denise Owen and Darla Wigginton, and her daughter, Mariane, by Cynthia Clayton and Heidi Henderson.

Tartuffe will be performed through Nov. 28 at the Montgomery Theater on Market Street at San Carlos in San Jose. Tickets range from $16 to $44 and may be ordered from BASS Tickets (408) 998-2277.

'Tasty Affair': A cornucopia of delights to benefit public radio station KAZU

THE DOUBLETREE Hotel will host the eighth annual winetasting extravaganza, "A Tasty Affair," beginning at 6:30 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 19, as a benefit for public radio station KAZU.

Thirty-eight of the wineries and vineyards in California will be pouring a wide variety of chardonnnays, cabernets, champagnes and more.

Nearly 20 chefs of the Monterey Bay region will be on hand to create an evening of taste temptations.

Vintners from David Bruce Winery, Felton Empire Schramsberg Vineyards and Turnbull Wine Cellars are joining the event for the first time this year.

This annual event features non-alcoholic beverages as well. Ariel Vineyards will once again be offering their non-alcoholic wines and will be joined by Satori's herbal teas, Gizdich Ranch's apple juice, Odwalla's juices and Hillside Coffee's java drinks. New this year will be samples from Paradise Tropical Teas.

Assorted taste treats will be offered by returning purveyors. Fifi's Cafe will present hors d'oeuvres and French pastries, The Pebble Beach Resort will serve gravlox and Sweet Retreat Bakery will contribute cream puffs.

Grapes of Wrath Catering, Tarpy's Roadhouse and Tutto Buono will also participate, along with other area eateries.

The tasting will last until 9 p.m. The new blues band, Red Beans and Rice, will accompany the event.

Tickets cost $50 and are available at Carmel Music Company, Bay Books and Bookworks, or by calling KAZU at 375-7275.

Local poets will read at Portofino on Nov. 10

CAROL STAUDACHER and Bonnie Gartshore will appear in the National Writers Union Reading Series at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 10, at Portofino Cafe in Pacific Grove.

Staudacher's poetry has appeared in many journals and anthologies, and she was writer-in-residence at Saratoga's Villa Montalvo Center.

Gartshore is a poet, teacher and journalist who has lived on the Monterey Peninsula for many years.

'Social Security' at Cherry Center: A 'terrific little show'

By MATTHEW FRIDAY

ANDREW BERGMAN'S comedy, Social Security, is playing through Nov. 14 at Carmel's Cherry Hall.

Director Sandy Williams' deft touch lends edge and verve to the unexpected twists of the play, a bittersweet comedy that gives us tenderness, hilarity and mellow bemusement through a family rediscovering innocence and insight in late middle age.

No dead space on stage

The play, presented by Stage Right Productions, is set without changes in the almost-stylish apartment of art dealers David and Barbara Kahn.

Six actors provide reasonably undoctored images of a family gnawing at its limbs for freedom.

Deirdre McCauley's Barbara has the modern, haughty look of a New York model. She's astute and quick-witted, delivering her lines with either comic aplomb or intensity. As an actress, she always has something going on and leaves no dead space on the stage.

Playing Barbara's husband, David, Ron Genauer delivers a slightly tacky character who you know will never be comfortable with anybody. A wise guy, he is cleverly undisguised behind a loud orange-red tie with a chartreuse palm tree. His brass-ornamented shoes and not-too-far-off-the-streets appeal suggest a fly-by-night aspect to the couple's art dealership, but this intimation will prove not quite true. The Kahns have a rather successful history in the city, and he's far warmer and more flexible than he seems.

Urban glamor, suburban roots

In sharp contrast to the supposed sophistication of this Manhattan couple, Barbara's dreary sister, Trudy, played by Anne Trivitte, and her too-sober husband, Martin, played by Michael Robbins, reveal the family's suburban roots.

Turns out, of course, nobody is really so far from home — the accent may be gone (in the case of the Kahns) but the unfinished business, petty resentments, testiness and jealousy remain.

No one reveals these conflicts so clearly as the women's mother, Sophie, a wild-haired woman who lives in a housecoat, kvetches constantly and currently resides with Trudy and Martin. Her move to David and Barbara's apartment provides the show's catalyst for upending all the old expectations and prejudices and allowing (recaptured) youth to have its way.

Nancy Kocher is perfect as Sophie. Her accent, which may not be necessary but is fun, anyway, doesn't shift with the mood, arguments or tempo of the play.

Suitably ironic, Sophie surprises with the sideways look that opens up comic space in a line; she's sarcastic, maybe just a little mean and enervating, and she leaves half-finished lemon balls all over the place.

She creates an image, somehow, of the broken and haywire spokes of a wheel required to do some very clumsy turning — until she meets the artist, Maurice Koenig.

Played by Len Parry, Maurice captures Sophie's imagination, as she does his, and the results are transforming. Parry's character is charming, whimsical, quite famous and a bit doddering.

Ravishing, smitten matron

As romance blooms between the two, Sophie's years drop away, along with the interest-inspiring neuroses that had seemed to give at least one daughter's life shape, purpose and value.

We discover a ravishing, smitten matron in the glowing Sophie and, with that, the wisdom she's been hiding for years.

Timing seems very important in this kind of show, and if things slow down occasionally, at least everyone knows who they are on stage, so the audience looks forward to whatever's coming.

Outstanding support staff

Everybody does his or her part — and more. Kudos to an outstanding support staff for their work, particularly light and sound operator Heather Folsom, for her readiness and constancy.

Overall, a terrific little show, not too heavy but pleasing.

Social Security plays Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m., Sundays at 7 p.m., with one dollar of each ticket going to the Family Resource Center. Reservations are available by calling 625-3200.

Blues lose out — Monterey Brewing Co. calls it quits; final performance Nov. 15

MONTEREY BREWING Company, Cannery Row venue where for years this area's younger blues bands found an audience and reputations, will give up its music policy in mid-November and move to new quarters.

Word on the drastic changes came from the establishment's owner, Anthony Bindel, who said "they were forced upon me by the legal hassles with (the music licensing agency) BMI."

Bands at Monterey Brewing Company played for tips and the door charge. Since he did not pay them a fixed rate, Bindel said, he should not have to fork over the fees attached to the public performance of compositions registered with the agency.

However, BMI won a $58,000 default judgment in U.S. District Court last springtime.

Bindel declared bankruptcy and went into reorganization, he said. "I couldn't afford lawyers and tried to handle my own (legal) writing. The court said I did not use the proper forms; I was unable to meet a certain deadline."

Bindel said the final band will play the Cannery Row room on Nov. 15. He'll move to 511 Tyler in Monterey, he said, and work strictly as a wholesale brewer.

"I think that (legal) situation was a tragedy," Bindel said. "An art form — blues — is being taken away from us. Conditions are really hard on a small business."

Local gallery representation

During the last Monterey Jazz Festival, jazz portrait artist Bruni Sablan had a one-woman show at a "coffee house" set up on our fairgrounds.

"I was blown away by people's reactions to the work," she said — "especially the reactions of African-Americans. One lady wept while looking at a portrait of Bessie Smith and then told me: 'Nobody ever paints us with such insight.' Grown men got tears in their eyes when they saw my pictures of John Coltrane and Dizzy Gillespie."

And after a thoughtful pause: "I fell in love with the viewers and the Monterey Peninsula all over again. I started hoping for association with a good art gallery in Carmel."

A Brazilian firebrand and person of great faith, Bruni already had her own Old Town Art Center in Los Gatos. And then her wish for local ties came true.

Her paintings will be exhibited by the new Dodge/LaRue Gallery of married art adepts Richard and Sheila LaRue. The bright place opened its doors last weekend. On Dolores between Fifth and Sixth.

Bruni's assistant, Mark Gray, met with Richard and Sheila over some Sablan paintings. The three got on beautifully. A working agreement was forged within minutes.

"Those who recommended her Jazz Masters Series were absolutely correct," Richard said. "Her work's really exciting. Sheila and I were overwhelmed by the quality — and we're delighted to have the paintings here."

Bruni sang jazz for a spell and relates to its makers on a deeply spiritual level. The portraits shouldn't be missed. (Low-cost color reproductions are available too.)

Hot times

Monterey Bay Hot Jazz Society schedules its annual Founders' Day Celebration for 1:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 14, at the Moose Lodge in Del Rey Oaks.

Spokespersons Chuck and Lynn Palomino say a much-admired Sacramento trad band — Jazz Beaux II — has been booked for the occasion. The leader is drummer, vocalist and funnywoman Dee Hendricks.

Door charges: $4 (members) and $6 (non-members). As usual, ladies are invited to bring their umbrellas and join the Dancing Jubilators. Trad musicians can join the jam sets at will.

Gleason archives

The late jazz critic Ralph Gleason helped Jimmy Lyons shape the vision for Monterey Jazz Festival. From 1 until 9:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 6, San Francisco Jazz Festival will use the Kabuki Theater to show Gleason documentaries and TV footage about giants of the music.

The five programs cost $7 apiece. Subjects: Duke Ellington, Louis Armstrong, Dizzy Gillespie, Art Farmer, Coltrane, Sonny Rollins, Cannonball Adderley, Jimmy Rushing, B.B. King, Jimmy Witherspoon with Ben Webster, Jefferson Airplane, Santana, Grateful Dead.

A Brazil on the Bay Cruise aboard the California Hornblower will leave Pier 33 at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 10. Costs are $20 (general) and $45 (with buffet dinner). Info: (415) 788-7353.

It's a fine talent lineup — Terra Sul, Celia Malheiros and Friends, Ginga Brasil Dancers, Joyce Cooling Trio. Boa musica!

Phantom of the barbershop: Cypressaires Chorus makes appearance this Saturday in Pacific Grove

THE CYPRESSAIRES Barbershop Chorus will present its annual harmony fest at 8 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 6 in the Pacific Grove Middle School auditorium.

The chorus will be joined by guest groups Mixed Metafour and A Tonic Explosion. Veteran thespians Tom Marr and Chris Kirk from California's First Theater and the Cypressaire's new musical director, Sam Gonzales, will also appear.

From Watsonville, Marina, Salinas and throughout the Monterey Peninsula, the Cypressaires meet once a week to sing in the barbershop style and prepare for performances and competitions.

The local chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America is one of nearly 800 throughout the world formed to sustain and preserve an American tradition. Today it is the largest fraternity of singers with more than 36,000 members.

Besides singing for fun, the Cypressaires help raise funds for Heartspring, an educational facility for children with special needs. Barbershoppers have donated thousands of hours of time and more than $400,000 annually to support Heartspring. General admission tickets for the show may be obtained by calling Don Sprouse at 899-3400.

PAUL JONES, Jeb Morris, Chuck Tingley and Don Sprouse are members of the Cypressaires Barbershop Chorus, which will perform this weekend.

AMY KRUPSKI (above) and Diana Stork will discuss harp traditions at Monterey Bookshop.

Harp talk slated for Nov. 10

HARPISTS DIANA Stork and Amy Krupski will discuss harp traditions from cultures around the world and will perform samples of several harp styles at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 10 at the Monterey Coffeehouse Bookshop.

Diana Stork, solo harpist, is a member of the musical group Geist and founder of the Festival of Harps.

Stork moves effortlessly from concert folk harp to Venezuelan, Celtic and Medieval styles. Her first solo album, Herald of Spring, was praised by George Winston as "a great album with beautiful variety."

Amy Krupski, a long-time resident of Pacific Grove, plays the Celtic harp. Krupski will perform as part of a Festival of Harps event at the Monterey Bay Aquarium on the afternoon of Dec. 4. Krupski has several recordings, including From the Gates of Heaven, Celtic Tides and Christmas Memories from Monterey.

Acclaimed baritone will perform in S.C.

AMERICAN BARITONE Sanford Sylvan will perform in recital with the Lydian String Quartet, quartet in residence at Brandeis University, at 8 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 5. Their joint program will be presented in the Performing Arts Concert Hall at University of California, Santa Cruz.

This concert will feature the artists performing individually and together. Works include Maurice Ravel's String Quartet in F Major and Samuel Barber's Hermit Songs, among others.

Sylvan has been acclaimed in the United States and Europe for his portrayals of Figaro in Le nozze di Figaro and Don Alfonso in Cosi fan tutte. He was also a favorite of local audiences at the 1991 Cabrillo Music Festival in Santa Cruz. Sylvan has had two Grammy nominations.

The Lydian String Quartet — Daniel Stepner and Judith Eisenberger, violin, Mary Ruth Ray, viola, and Rhonda Rider, cello — was formed in 1980 and has since enjoyed worldwide critical acclaim.

The ensemble's flair for contemporary music, as well as its interpretive mastery of standard quartet repertoire, have won prizes at international competitions in Banff, Evian and Portsmouth. The group has also garnered the prestigious Naumburg Award for Chamber Music.

As artists-in-residence on the faculty of Brandeis University, the members of the quartet teach chamber music ensembles.

Tickets for the performance cost $16 for general admission and $13 for students and seniors. They are available by calling 459-2159.

SANFORD SYLVAN, judged 'America's leading baritone' by the San Francisco Examiner, will sing Nov. 5.

New England impressionist to open show at Cottage Gallery

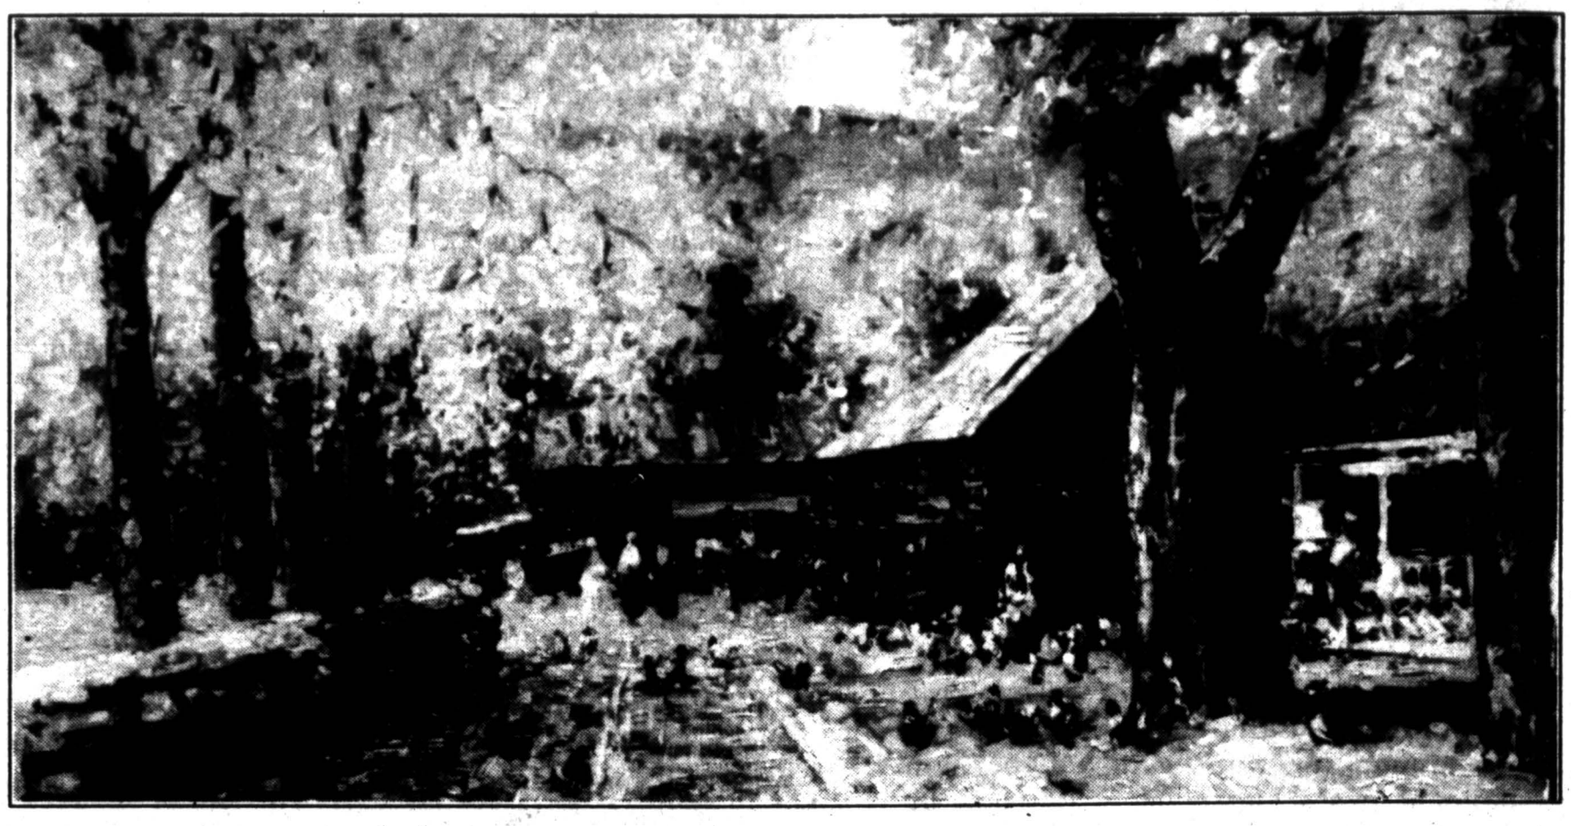
COTTAGE GALLERY in Carmel will host a reception from 4 to 7 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 6 to mark the opening of an exhibit by New England impressionist, John C. Terelak.

Terelak has been painting for more than 30 years. His work is included in The National Academy of Design, The Boston Museum of Fine Arts, The Springfield Museum and The Butler Museum.

His paintings are in the permanent collections of the Andrew Mellon Foundation, the Sheraton Corporation, the Winthrop Financial Corporation, and the Prudential Insurance Company, as well as numerous other bank and corporate collections and thousands of private collections.

Terelak's creations are painted in oil on linen canvas. His subject matter is broad. This exhibit comprises paintings of landscapes of New England, city scenes, gardens, still lifes and subjects drawn from the artist's trips to France.

Further information may be obtained by contacting Cottage Gallery at 624-7888.



LUCIO SOLLAZZI'S 'Rustic' is at Zantman Galleries.

Sollazzi paintings on exhibit at Zantman through Nov. 20

PAINTINGS BY Lucio Sollazzi are displayed through Nov. 20 at Zantman Art Galleries in Carmel. Born in Italy in 1925, Sollazzi studied with the artist Borgognoni, attending Milan's Accademia di Brera. Scenes of ancient towns in Greece, Italy, Spain, Switzerland and the North African coast are the subjects of his compositions.

Sollazzi's work is shown in the United States exclusively by Zantman. The gallery will hold a reception for the exhibit from 3 to 6 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 6. Information is available by calling 624-8314.

THE REVIEW

Exceptional Larkin 'lets the lyrics take charge'

things a month so I keep focused on it but that's hard to do when I'm on the road."

One of the most striking manifestations of Larkin's talent is her strong command of various musical styles. On Angels Running, she runs the gamut from acoustic folk to folk rock, Celtic and even a song flavored with African rhythms.

Whatever her style and subject matter, Larkin's songs are honest and richly textured. There's no formula writing here.

Larkin's career has progressed quickly. In 1987 she released her debut recording, Step Into the Light, followed a year later with I'm Fine, both on Philo/Rounder Records. The two albums were well received and earned her several awards. In 1990 Larkin released a live album, Live in the Square, again on Philo/Rounder.

"I wanted to show people what I could do live. That's really my medium. I'm much more at home in performance than in the studio. Hopefully the studio work will catch up as I continue to do it."

High Street released Larkin's next album, Tango, in 1991. She co-produced it along with Will Ackerman. In the two years between the release of Tango and Angels Running, Larkin further honed her songwriting skills.

"I listened to alternative rock music, edgier writers. I got into Bob Dylan's writing and his use of words. I tried to work on my lyrics and have them control where the song went. I didn't want them to necessarily be attached to the melody so strongly that the melody would control the lyric sound, such as how many syllables I could use."

"Instead I thought of what I wanted to say. What kind of feeling I wanted to convey. How percussive did I want to get. That was a real change for me. The melody still drives my songwriting but I don't feel as locked in. I tried to let the lyric take charge and have some fun with it, too."

Larkin is looking forward to her upcoming performance in Santa Cruz. She explains that doing concerts is "a real joy for me. I try to be entertaining and have a good time. When people come to your show they are either your guests and/or your employers."

"It's a very odd relationship, and I don't take that lightly. I really do try to put on a good show and make sure that the performance is there. It's an honor to have people come by."

Overall, Larkin says, "I know that I've chosen the right road for me. I couldn't be happier about what's happening with my music and career."

"The singer-songwriter, acoustic music movement is blossoming, and in some ways I'm right in the middle of that."

Murphy: 'Things look impossible'

being able to change locations."

And what of the Portofino space in Pacific Grove Plaza? "I'm booked (with bands and other acts) through next May," Murphy said. "Greg says he needs to widen the hallway for the fire code, and I can't have live entertainment after Nov. 15. And I'll have no use of the patio."

"Most of my business revolves around entertainment. Things look impossible. I'll hunt for alternatives, but it's very likely that I'll shut down and forget the sadness of it. I really don't know where I'd go at this point."

Developer Beardsley said, "Barbara's lease calls for the use of 500 square feet, and she has slowly expanded out of the leased space. The two top floors include 16 time-share dwelling units owned by 800 people. I guess she could still use her space for poetry, but we absolutely have to shut down the music. We can't have the loud drums and electric guitars — no one can get to sleep upstairs."

"I like Barbara and wish her well. She went public with the (proposed) move; this group called Friends of Portofino was organized. I was hoping she would get some good advice on how to accomplish the whole thing."

Les Rudas said, "I feel sorry for Barbara. What happened wasn't anybody's fault; it was a basic misunderstanding. We wanted to create something special for Portofino. Unfortunately, a lot of important points were not addressed until the 23rd hour (before the proposed move). We renovated the space in ways a landlord normally wouldn't think of doing. She got in too deep financially, and we just couldn't go any further."

He continued, "Barbara had a vision. I have no hesitation in saying neither of us knew which deal we had. It's a horrible situation. No, there's no one else lined up for the space. Barbara says she has seen an attorney. Ultimately, I think resolution will come through common sense."

Murphy said she had contacted a lawyer about "getting my investment (at the old Grove Theater site) back."

'Myth of Male Power' is tinged with misogyny

By MIKE SCHMITZ

WARREN FARRELL is a once reliably-liberated hand in the feminist band who has certainly been drummed out by now. His latest book, The Myth of Male Power, is blunt and angry. It seems like a response to Susan Faludi's Backlash of a couple of years ago.

Whether Farrell's book will also become a best-seller may say much about the state of gender politics in the United States. Like Faludi, Farrell rolls out caissons of statistical artillery — and comes to vastly different conclusions.

Men disposable

Chief among them is his contention that men are not the powerful sex but the disposable one.

He argues that men gravitate toward high-paying, high-stress jobs that lead to an early death because they know they face a lifetime of having to support a wife and family.

He states that men have higher mortality rates than women for the 15 leading causes of death, higher suicide rates and a life expectancy that has barely grown at all during the 20th century while female longevity has skyrocketed.

Farrell states that men consistently put their lives on the line to protect women, whether in wartime or as unpaid bodyguards in peacetime.

And they are socialized into the heroism of violence in war and on the playing field. Then they are vilified for being the violent sex.

Farrell contends that 14 national studies have shown that men and women are equally responsible for domestic violence, but only women are seen as the victims.

The 400-plus pages of The Myth of Male Power are loaded with bombshell data. But some of his arguments are based on very few sources, or on anecdotes. And much of his book is tinged with misogyny.

Farrell seems to see women as vengeful and privileged. He criticizes them for being convinced that they are victims of constant male abuse and demanding special protections from the very structures that oppress them, while at the same time asserting their equality.

Paradox of empowerment

In fact, The Myth of Male Power buys stock in the paradox of empowerment. In order to feel powerful nowadays, a group has to first feel victimized. There is no sense of entitlement without victimization. Farrell realizes this late in the book when he mentions that we have neither a patriarchy nor a matriarchy but a "victimarchy."

But it is questionable whether men as a group can ever feel much in the way of victimization.

Farrell would say that men are too busy working themselves to death, and too scared to express their feelings for fear of criticism and rejection.

Others would say that men initiate and perpetuate the very tragedies that victimize them. Even Farrell, when using the word "we" in his criticisms of society, has to be aiming his censures at men.

For example, it is courageous of him to criticize football as "male abuse," but for most guys, football is the stuff of valorous manhood.

Furthermore, nothing will improve if equality between the sexes, as Farrell envisions it, comes about.

The "men's movement," which the author sees as the catalyst for such change, often comes across as one more pressure group.

As Christopher Lasch wrote recently, "The market for self-pity, it appears, is inexhaustible."

PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
VACATION & LONG-TERM RENTALS

We are currently seeking vacation homes and long term rentals for our property management department. We have numerous clients waiting for vacation homes this summer. We also have need of yearround vacation rentals. Why not let your home work for you when you are not using it? We treat your home as if it was ours. We offer peace of mind for our owners, furnish computer itemized statements, and maintain higher occupancy percentages. San Carlos Agency has been doing property management on the peninsula for over 40 years. Call us for more information..
